Research says student stress is overplayed

Three semesters of research conducted by four Creighton professors indicates that medical students, at least at Creighton, are not subjected to unusual levels of student stress.

Drs. Robert Mitchell, Janet Matthews, James Lupo and Thomas Grandy collaborated on the research and ensuing paper titled "Medical Student Stress: An Overconcern." Their paper has recently been accepted for publication by the Journal of Medical Education.

"What the results of our research have done is ask the question: How much is a school obliged to offer by way of support facilities?" said Lupo. "There will always be the student who needs extra support, but our findings indicate 'don't force it,' " he said.

Conclusions reached

Two conclusions were reached through their research, he said. First, the level of pathological stress found in medical students is no more than established norms for other students, and second, stress levels do not vary according to the amount of counseling received, he said.

"Traditionally, everyone takes for granted the fact that medical students are subjected to (unusual) levels of stress," said Lupo. And while every student is exposed to some stress, such as an upcoming test, none, including medical students, are suffering chronic stress.

Lupo said there are several reasons why Creighton students may not be experiencing the "traditional" stress. Many attended Creighton's undergraduate school and are therefore not subjected to a change in atmosphere.

Past claims that medical students have been under "unusual" stress have been made without documented justification, he said. "Ours is the first effort to objectively test stress levels in these students." Past tests have been subjective in nature, he said.

Divided into groups

The students under research investigation were divided into three groups. The first group attended weekly counseling sessions with peers and a trained clinical psychiatrist. A second group talked once with one experimenter about the effects and symptoms of chronic pathological stress — ulcerated stomachs, feelings of unease, etc., he said. The third group received no counseling at all.

Each group was given a stress evaluation test at the end of the first semester of research. Then the counseling period ensued for the second semester. Students were then tested again. The results of these tests surprised the experimenters, he said. No evidence of pathological stress surfaced in any of the test groups.

The Journal has not yet set a publication date for the paper but said it would be published at the first possible date, Lupo said.

Register reports attrition rate hits low point in 3 years

The spring enrollment figures reflect an attrition rate lower than the previous three years. According to a report issued by University Registrar Jack N. Williams, the attrition rate between the fall and spring semesters is 3.77 percent.

Spring semester enrollment totals 5,468, compared to the fall enrollment of 5,682.

The enrollment for spring 1982 was 5,511 compared to a fall 1981 total of 5,766. Attrition rates between semesters that year and the previous year (1980-81) were both 4.42 percent.

Mid-year attrition is due in part to transfers, graduation and those students who do not return for academic or other reasons after completing one semester, Williams said.

University asking for research funds

Creighton officials will ask the Lancaster County District Court at a Monday hearing to require that the state consider applications for research contracts submitted by Creighton scientists.

The university is asking the court to order that health department regulations now being followed in awarding contracts for research on cancer and other smoking-related diseases be rewritten. A bill passed by the 1981 Legislature authorized giving state funds to the health department, which is to allocate for research.

In September, Creighton cancer researcher Henry Lynch applied for a research contract to study whether smoking increases the risk of breast cancer among individuals genetically susceptible to the disease.

State Health Director Henry Smith notified Creighton in November that the department was unable to file and process the application because it can enter into contracts only with schools that are owned or controlled by the state or one of its political subdivisions.

The Rev. James Hoff, S.J., associate vice president for health sciences at Creighton, said the university contends that the current legislation regulations do not reflect the intention of the Legislature.

According to the bill, "The University of Nebraska may receive such grants and contracts and other post-secondary institutions having a college of medicine located in the state of Nebraska may receive such contracts."

Creighton is the only other institution in the state that has a college of medicine.

Gong Show benefits Muscular Dystrophy

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity will present its sixth annual Gong Show tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in Rigge Science 120. Admission will be $2.00 at the door.

Every year the Gong Show is a benefit for a different charity, and this year it is for Muscular Dystrophy. The SAEs will donate $1,000 to Muscular Dystrophy, even if they do not reach that figure in proceeds from the Gong Show, according to Arts sophomore Erick Rath, one of the show's organizers.

The show will consist of 25-30 acts, 10 of which are performed by SAE members, he said. The SAEs, however, cannot win the prize money, he added, which is $51.37 for first, and $1.39 for second. Auditions were held Monday and Tuesday.

Nate McCoy, a Law school student who has been the master of ceremonies for several years, will resume his duties for this show.

Rath said the Muscular Dystrophy poster child, 14-year-old Betsy Braun, and her mother will be present for the festivities.

Business senior Mark Layton and Business sophomore Pat Walmsley are also organizing the Gong Show this year.

VP candidates down to 7; Forums begin Monday

The search for a new vice president of student personnel is down to the final stages as a field of 91 applicants has been reduced to seven finalists, according to the Rev. Thomas Schloemer, S.J., chairman of the Search Committee.

The position was vacated when James Doyle left in August for a similar position at DePaul University in Chicago. Mrs. Eileen Lieben is the acting vice president, but did not apply for the permanent position. However, Tom Schnitker, associate dean of students, is one of the finalists.

Schloemer said the position includes responsibility over residence halls, the Counseling Center, the Placement Office, Student Financial Aid, Student Health and intramural athletics.

Because of this diversity, Schloemer said they are seeking "a person sensitive to all the different publics that office comes in contact with." He said they also want "a person with administrative experience who could direct that area," and "somebody who has imagination and vision."

Each finalist will be interviewed by several committees and groups, as well as participating in an open forum. At the forum, each candidate will give a biographical sketch followed by a question and answer period for guests.

The forums will be in room 108 of the Communication Arts building from 1:30-2:30 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Feb. 14, 16, 18 and 21. Schnitker will be speaking Wednesday.

The groups that interview the candidates will give their recommendations to the Search Committee, Schloemer said. The Committee will then relay their top choices to University President Michael Morrison, S.J., who will choose the new vice president. Schloemer said the decision may be made by early March.

Maril elected Law president

Law junior Steven A. Maril has been elected president of Creighton's Student Bar Association.

Other officers voted in on Jan. 31 were Colleen Parsley, SBA vice president, Lori Tobin, secretary, both law juniors and Joseph Decaminada, treasurer, a first-year law student.

Maril takes over the post from Mike Haller, a Law senior. Haller said he was pleased with his year as president and hopes that Maril will continue working for the projects his administration initiated.

"I have every confidence in the new officers," said Haller, "and I hope that they pursue a lot of the things we started."

Among those achievements, he said, was the renewal of faculty evaluations. The evaluations "received favorable responses from the dean, the faculty and the students," Haller said.

Game benefits St. John's

KOIL radio and a team made up of Creighton faculty and staff squared off in a game Monday night in the Old Gym in a benefit for St. John's Church.

KOIL won, 84-82, although the Creighton team had a chance to tie it in the final seconds. The benefit raised over $430 for St. John's, according to Harry Trombitas

Trombitas also said that the game netted the largest amount of money of any KOIL benefit contest thus far.

The game was coordinated mainly by Joe Bridgeford of Public Safety.

'Jazz at its finest'

Luigi Waites, band perform for 100

Jazz performer Luigi Waites and the Omaha Jazz Society Band performed Jan. 28 in the upper Brandeis Student Center in a concert sponsored by the All-University Committee on Concerts, Lectures and Films.

Luigi and his band are well-known in the Omaha area, playing in small nightclubs and on several college campuses.

Marsha Otteman, director of student programming, said, "We wanted something different. A committee member suggested a jazz band and it fit in the budget."

Eileen Lieben, the committee chairman, said another reason was Luigi and his band had performed at Creighton before and were well received.

Luigi and the band were again warmly welcomed by about 100 students, faculty and friends. Several times the audience applauded in appreciation in the middle of such jazz favorites as "Afternoon in Paris," "At Will," and "Satin Doll."

The band members are Kevin Mooney on guitar, Earlie Braggs on base guitar, Charles Gamble on drums, Richard Brown on trombone and flute, and Rich Cornell on saxophone. Luigi plays xylophone and percussion instruments such as maracas and the cowbell.

The music was jazz at its finest, as Drew Steiner, Arts sophomore said, "I didn't know anything about jazz before this concert, but now I like it."

Graduating seniors must meet deadline

Creighton University seniors expecting to graduate in May must file applications for their degrees by Feb. 15.

Seniors in the schools of Dentistry, Law, Medicine and Pharmacy have already been assessed a graduation fee. All other candidates must first purchase a Graduation Fee Ticket at the university business office (A113) and present the ticket to the registrar's office (A226) to obtain the degree application form.

The graduation fee is $35 for a bachelor's degree; $40 for a master's, and $45 for a doctorate.

'Birthday Party' to open Feb. 24

The upcoming Creighton play, "The Birthday Party," will open Feb. 24 at the Eppley Little Theater and promises to challenge its audience.

Written by Harold Pinter, the play is set in a seaside resort. It centers around the character Stanley Webber, played by Arts freshman Kevin Lawler. Stanley is a boarder at a rooming house owned by an elderly couple. Conflict evolves as two strangers arrive to confront Stanley. Described as a "psychological thriller" by director Bill Hutson, the play builds on mystery and is left open to interpretation.

Hutson said the cast, chosen from approximately 30 people, "couldn't be better." In addition to Lawler, the cast includes Arts junior Ray Spanola, Arts junior Tamasine Medinger, Arts freshman Beverly Bailey, Arts junior Robert Lee, and Alan Klem. The assistant director is Arts freshman Katie Connolly.

Medinger, a theater major, describes the play as an "interesting, stimulating experience." She said, "The audience will leave with questions they won't understand, but without those questions the play would be flat."

A former Creighton theater instructor, Klem plays Goldberg, one of two mysterious strangers. Klem said his character, "destroys people with his mind, using psychological torture." Klem, who feels audiences are not challenged enough, said Pinter leaves the play "ambiguous for the audience," and open to many levels of interpretation.

Pinter has also written films, the most successful being "The French Lieutenant's Woman." Hutson said with Pinter's writing "the usual becomes significant when power struggles over the little things become incredible battles."

The play will be performed Feb. 24-26, and March 2-5, at 8 p.m. A preview performance will be Feb. 23.

Arts Senate plans Spring term events

The goals of the Arts Senate are to provide an organization which students can turn to for support on "home base stuff," according to President, Chuck Jaksich. It strives for inter-governmental cooperation and acts as a watchdog over the Student Board of Governors and other organizations in order to protect the students, Jaksich said.

Last semester the Arts Senate sponsored a TGIF to raise money, and Nebraska Sen. Ed Zorinsky and then Nebraska gubernatorial candidate Bob Kerrey both spoke. A book sale was held in order to enable students to purchase inexpensive books. The Arts Senate also had a series on Virgil and a food drive, Jaksich said.

The book sale and food drive will be repeated this semester and Zorinsky will be returning, Jaksich said.

Congressman Hal Daub will also speak and a debate is being planned between a member of the Ku Klux Klan and a Communist.

A M.A.S.H. party is also planned for Feb. 28, with beer and chips to view the final episode of the television comedy.

Turnabout Week, Jaksich said, begins April 4 and includes movies, a party and the dance at the end of the week.

'Queen of Blues' visits Howard Street

By Jeanne Haas

KoKo Taylor and Her Blues Machine performed for two nights at the Howard Street Tavern last weekend. Touring across the country, Taylor, better known as "The Queen of Blues," was well received in Omaha, as she sang before standing-room-only crowds on both nights.

Taylor has been performing for 20 years and has made eight albums along with her band, the Blues Machine.

Born in Memphis, Tenn., Taylor sang gospel music while she was growing up. She listened to the blues on the radio when B.B. King was a local disc jockey in West Memphis, Ark, as she dreamed of being a blues singer, she said.

When she was 18, Taylor married and moved to Chicago where she "sat-in" with local bands. She was discovered there by Willy Dixon, another blues artist, and was offered a recording contract with J.B. Lenoir of Chess Records in 1963.

Dream come true

"Being discovered was my dream come true," Taylor said between autographs, "although I didn't expect it to happen when and how it did." Taylor was told that her low, gravelly voice was what Dixon said the blues needed and he helped her

Taylor put together The Blues Machine, she said.

Best known for the song, "Wang Dang Doodle," written by Dixon, Taylor is also popular for "I'm A Woman," which she said is her answer to Muddy Waters' "Mannish Boy." Taylor writes "quite a few" of her own songs but also performs songs written by others, she said.

Taylor said she feels "pretty special" about being called the Queen of the Blues, "especially since not too many women make it in this type of music."

While touring in the United States and Europe, Taylor has played with many other blues greats such as Waters, King, Ray Charles, Son Seals, and John Lee Hooker.

Second visit

This was her second visit to Omaha, her first at the Howard Street Tavern four years ago. She said her favorite places to play are "places like this," indicating the dim, smoky barroom, "where people like the blues and get into the music."

Taylor added, "The blues are my life. It's part of my roots and it's everything to me. If I couldn't perform I'd shrivel up like a prune."

Bluejay fan says rude chants caused 'B' section eviction

As one of the "B" section at the New Mexico State basketball game Jan. 22, having sat only eight or 10 seats away from "confused and frustrated" Todd Connell, as he was being "harassed and...kicked out of the game," I beg to differ with his theory of fan participation.

For those not fortunate enough to see for themselves this model display of "student fan support," I might first point out that his use of the phrase "loud and rambunctious" fails to reflect the drunken frenzy that he and so many of his fraternity buddies were in. A pre-game Kamikaze "dinner" supplemented by beer during the game itself, moved this group beyond "rambunctious" and into a category of actions more aptly called "offensive" or "obnoxious."

Connell was not removed from the auditorium for his supporting the Jays, he was removed for his and his friends' rude chants, for their annoying the cheerleaders and the fans about them, for their yelling at those administrators unlucky enough to be seated above them, for their expressed and explicit opinions of the referees; in general, he was simply one of the many that continually disrupted the game.

I'll grant that perhaps even their antics may not equal those of the "fan clubs" at Wichita St., Marquette, or Notre Dame; but must they? Our remaining a Division I team is dependent upon our meeting certain criterion within our athletic program, not, as Connell suggested, upon our fans competing with theirs for the dubious distinction of being the most "loud and rambunctious."

Ride on Swanson elevator dismays volunteer fire officer

To the Editor:

It was with extreme dismay that I read in the Jan. 28 issue of the Creightonian that two Swanson dormitory officials rode the elevator when there was a definite possibility of a fire there.

The elevators of a building should never be used when there is the slightest possibility of a fire in the building, let alone in the elevator shaft. Jane McGrath and Renise Smith could have been trapped in the elevator, or could have been overcome with smoke.

The actions of these two persons shows that there is a critical lack of fire safety procedures at Creighton. As a fire department officer, I find this lack of procedures appalling. With the hundreds of people living in the dormitories, the potential for a great loss of life is high.

All students should be informed of fire evacuation procedures, and regular drills should be held. Fire alarm systems should be of the highest quality of protection available, and they should be tested at regular intervals. The Omaha Fire Department should be called immediately at the first sign of a fire. It is far better to have them arrive to find a false alarm than to arrive at a working fire where lives have been lost.

It is the responsibility of the University to provide adequate fire protection systems and fire prevention information. This time it was paper in an elevator shaft. The next time it could be a deadly tragedy.

Runner: Track etiquette needed

To the Editor:

Any day a person can go to the Kiewit Center and see several people trying to "work-off" those extra pounds that some how accumulated over the Christmas holidays. Since running has been identified as one of the best forms of exercise, many people have decided to begin running. Rather than brave the perils of Omaha's sidewalks, many have chosen to run on our inside track.

One doesn't have to be a physics major to know how much force is generated by a moving body. I was horrified last winter when I accidentally collided with a girl who ran out onto the track from behind a curtain. The resulting collision would have made Tom Osborne proud. However, she, unfortunately, ended up with a broken wrist.

Since track etiquette is almost unheard of in the Kiewit Center, and in an effort to avoid any future accidents, a few general guidelines need to be identified.

1) Look, before entering or leaving the track. Yes, that includes basketball players who seemingly regard runners as non-existent.

2) Leave a lane for passing (preferably on the outside). This also includes not running three or four abreast, which makes it impossible to pass.

3) People who are using the ever-popular Walkman's have to be extra careful, since these boredom-relieving devices impair one's sense of spatial awareness.

Common sense and common respect are the key for everyone's safety and enjoyment in the Kiewit Center.

Student requests MTV installation

To the Editor:

I write in the better interest of the students' need for an expanded form of entertainment on Creighton University's campus.

Recently, a new addition to the technology of communication was installed on campus. I am talking about Creighton's Satellite Cable Network located behind the Alumni Library. They legally provide many channels in addition to the relatively few that are monitored on the average television set in Omaha. The station is capable, with proper permission, of getting nearly any satellite channel accessible through satellite communications.

Although the station provides great channels on education, as in French, German and Spanish for language teaching, I feel, however, that if a survey were taken as to how many students actually view the network's services, very few would acknowledge even the station's existence!

So in this matter of further spreading student services I would like to directly

Michael (David Eaton) investigates his son's cod liver oil, which he thinks is bourbon, in the 'Fourposter.'

'The Fourposter' fits well, although acting lacking

By Erica Means

"The Fourposter," currently playing at the Upstairs Dinner Theater is fitting for the month of February and Valentine's Day. The three-act play shows a couple moving from their wedding night through 35 years of marriage.

The acting, however, is sometimes stilted and the combination of drama and comedy is unconvincing.

As the years pass, the pictures on the walls change, pieces of furniture change, for their 17-year-old son to return home after his night on the town.

Michael is convinced his son has become an alcoholic because of the bourbon bottle he discovered in his son's room. Unfortunately, Michael decides to sample the contents of the bottle himself, and discovers it actually is old cod liver oil.

In other scenes, the acting is good, but not exciting. Comic timing seems off in the first act, and the funny lines tend to fall flat. The first scene, their wedding night, needs refinement. The third act tries to be more dramatic and touching than funny, but the acting is short of convincing.

Pre-show entertainment by the theater's waiters and waitresses is a collection of love songs from musical comedies with dance routines. The four performers sing well together, but pre-recorded accompaniment and poor choreography distracted from the sound.

Hap Abraham's buffet featured a variety of tempting salads. A limited number of reduced price tickets for some performances are available through the SBG office.

the characters age, but the large fourposter bed remains the same. The play, by Jan de Hartog, was the basis for the musical, "I Do, I Do," which starred Mary Martin and Robert Preston. The play takes place between the years 1890 and 1925.

The main characters, Michael and Agnes, are played by David Eaton and Eunie Denenberg. Their strongest acting comes in the second act while, at 4 a.m., they wait ask those who operate the satellite station to consider installing Music Television (MTV) and expanding the abilities of the Network toward a source of good entertainment for the students, as well as a good source of educational material.

One might argue, "If we get MTV then why don't we just install Home Box Office or other cable movie stations?" The reason I chose MTV is because it is very inexpensive if not free through a satellite network such as Creighton's. Also, it is continuous entertainment that can be viewed any time during the day or night without needing a schedule. Many students have nothing better to do in their free time during lunch except to go back to their rooms and sleep!

As far as how the off-campus resident could use the entertainment, I would like to point out that there are two TVs in lower Brandeis which have cable hook up — the Knothole and the Drawing Room.

Music Television revolutionized music and video; combined them in stereo and organized the world's first video radio. The announcers are even referred to as "Videojockies" instead of the more traditional "Disc jockey". To see MTV is to actually believe it.

Although I can understand that some students might be compelled to view the channel during finals week; I raise the counter-point that even if it's finals week there are numerous students who are distracted at that time in other ways anyway. That decision must be made by the student mature enough to know when to study.

Let's take advantage of what we have and if the Creighton Organization of Students for Monitoring Ongoing Sciences (COSMOS), would like to help the interest of the student, I urge them as well as those students interested in the dorms and off-campus to pursue this potential capability and express your opinions by calling the Earth Station at 280-4063 so they can put it to further good use for us, the students of Creighton University.

Business dean pleased with first term

With the aims of his first semester as dean of the College of Business Administration generally accomplished, Dr. Guy Banville said he is heading into his second with several new goals.

When Banville arrived last August from St. Louis University, two things he said he wanted to accomplish were getting to know how Creighton operated and setting up an advisory council to the dean consisting of faculty, students and leaders in the business community.

"First, I had to orient myself to the university, the other colleges, the faculty and the staff," Banville said. "It was a learning experience. I think now I understand the university."

No appointments yet

While no definite appointments have been made to the advisory council, Banville said a list of names of potential members has been drawn up and, hopefully, an announcement will be made within the next 30 days as to who will serve on the council.

Pikes praised for services

To the Editor:

On Saturday, Jan. 22, Creighton students from the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and the Sisters of the Shield and Diamond responded generously to an invitation to assist in the distribution of federal cheese and butter surplus. Forty young men and women helped in the distribution of 94,000 pounds of cheese and 68,000 pounds of butter to more than 12,000 people in freezing temperatures at the St. Vincent de Paul warehouse at 2122 Cuming Street and the South Omaha Neighborhood Association at 5211 South 31st Street.

At a time when we hear negative observations about people in our society, it is heartening to witness the compassion of our students. I join the many who praise these Creighton students for giving of themselves and their time to help the poor and the elderly. For a tremendous public act of social justice, they deserve a public word of thanks!

establishment, other goals of Banville's for the upcoming semester include starting a newsletter for alumni of the business college, initiating seminars for the alumni, looking into the possibility of offering a master's program in management information and computer science and reinstituting a certificate program in business for students in the College of Arts and Sciences.

The latter program, Banville explained, would work as follows: An arts and sciences major would take certain foundation courses in business. Upon graduation, that student would receive a degree in his major, along with a certificate in business administration.

'Friendly environment'

"The administration, the faculty, the students and the staff have exhibited friendliness and cooperativeness," Banville said. "It has been an unexpected environment. It's definitely friendlier than I thought. Of all the campuses I've been exposed to, this one exceeds all expectations."

Banville listed the cooperation and support of the faculty and staff of the College of Business Administration and the administrators as the thing he liked most about Creighton.

"I'm quite pleased here," he continued, "I feel I've got the best job in town. Creighton has extended itself and I'm quite appreciative. Hopefully, I can reciprocate in the future."

At St. Louis U., Banville had been associate dean of the School of Business Administration since 1980. He was also a professor of marketing and was chairman of the school's department of marketing from 1975-80.

Junior takes first in speech tourney

Luella Bangura, Arts junior, won first place in the poetry division at a speech tournament at South Dakota State University, January 29. She won over a field of 40 students.

Business sophomore Mark Randell was a finalist in oratory and Business senior Kevin Monroe was a finalist in impromptu. Thirteen universities and colleges were represented in the tournament.

Benjamin injured

Jays to face Drake after 2 road losses

By Bob McDonald

The Bluejays lost two games on the road over the weekend, but an injury to 7-foot freshman center Benoit Benjamin will not keep him out the rest of the season, as thought possible earlier in the week.

Benjamin injured his left ankle during the second half of the Jays' 79-73 loss to New Mexico State Monday night in Las Cruces. The injury at first did not appear

Morris is the Jay's premier outside threat to be serious, however, X-rays taken in Las Cruces after the game indicated a possible fracture, which could have kept him out for the duration of the schedule.

Benjamin was on crutches Tuesday, and was examined Wednesday by Dr. Frank Iwerson, according to Creighton trainer Steve Monaco. New X-rays were taken here and they showed that he had a sprain on the inside of the ankle, but no fracture, according to Monaco.

As of Thursday morning, it was not certain whether Benjamin would play in the Bluejays' game against Bradley Thursday night.

All this was preceded by an 80-72 defeat at Tulsa Saturday night. The two losses dropped Creighton's log to 2-5 in the Missouri Valley Conference and 6-10 overall, not including the Jays' game with Bradley Thursday night at the Civic Auditorium.

The Jays now travel to Des Moines to play Drake Saturday night, still seeking their first win on the road, and return home for a game Monday night against West Texas State at the Auditorium.

In the Tulsa contest, the Jays' two-game win streak was halted as Steve Harris poured in 37 points to lead the Golden Hurricane. Tulsa built a 40-26 lead late in the first half, but they didn't score in the last three minutes as Creighton closed the gap to 40-35 at intermission.

Hurricane swells

The Hurricane swelled again in the second half as Tulsa broke open a 60-55 game with 10 straight points, the first eight by Harris. The Jays never got closer than the final margin of eight again. Sophomore guard Vernon Moore led Creighton with 20 points, including eight of nine shooting from the field.

Coach Willis Reed said, "Two things hurt us. The free throws and the turnovers." The Jays committed 23 turnovers and connected on 20 of 29 free shots.

Reed was optimistic, however, as he said, "All in all, I thought we played very well. We could have gotten blown out," but they battled back, and "that's a credit." He added, "We're going to beat some people if we play hard every night."

That wasn't the case against New Mexico State, however. The Jays played hard again, but a 37-36 lead in the first minute of the second half slowly dissipated until the Aggies led 76-60 with 2:30 remaining. Creighton did score eight of the next nine points, but the comeback attempt died when freshman Reggie Morris missed on a 3-point try with a minute left.

Moore tallies 19

Ernest Patterson and Steve Colter were the major thorns in Creighton's side as each scored 22 points for the Aggies. Moore led Creighton again with 19 points as he played the full 40 minutes.

Benjamin was injured as he slipped while en route to a breakaway stuff with just under eight minutes to play. For the game, he scored 16 points. Just nine days earlier, Benjamin riddled the Aggies for 36 in an 85-74 Creighton triumph in Omaha.

Turnovers continued to plague the Jays, as they lost possession 27 times.

Reed was encouraged that the Jays "still played hard at the end." He said, "We haven't quit and let someone blow us out yet." The widest loss margin this year was 12 points against Marquette Jan. 2, although that game was closer than the score indicates.

Lady Jays net 2 road wins; Drake rematch set Feb. 10

By Lisa Boyer

The Lady Jay basketball team boosted its record to 11-7 with recent wins over South Dakota and Southwest Missouri State University. The next home game for the team will be Feb. 10 against Drake University. Earlier this year, Drake defeated Creighton, 73-61.

Against South Dakota, the Lady Jays took the lead immediately and kept it throughout the remainder of the contest, winning 75-66. Leading scorer for Creighton was freshman Connie Yori, with 28 points. Yori also led in rebounding with 14.

Despite the win, Coach Bruce Rasmussen was not pleased with the performance. "This game was our poorest performance of the year," said Rasmussen, adding, "we had a good stretch of play in the last three minutes of the first half and in the last five or six minutes of the second half, but other than that we didn't play that well."

Against Southwest Missouri, junior Janet Kundrat had a career high of 17 points and 19 rebounds, leading the Lady Jays to a 59-40 victory.

Once again, the team controlled the game from the outset, leading by 12 at halftime. Defensively, according to Rasmussen, the team played well. "It was our best defensive game of the year and the best defensive game since I have been coaching at Creighton," he said.

Swim team 'revenge meet' set

By Bob McDonald

The men's swimming team, sporting a 6-6 record, is in Vermillion, S.D. today to take on the University of South Dakota. They will return tonight as they face Northern Iowa and Concordia College in a triangular meet Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Kiewit Center.

The battle with South Dakota today is "a revenge meet," according to Coach Gary Major, as they defeated the Jay swimmers in a meet at the University of Nebraska at Omaha Nov. 20. He said, "Based on times I've seen, the meet will be decided by one or two points either way."

As for Northern Iowa, Major said, "Their depth will beat us," as they are one of the top teams the Jays will face this year. The Jays, however, will defeat Concordia for the same reason, Major said.

The swimmers have had two meets since Christmas break, including a triangular against UNO and Northeast Missouri State Jan. 15. The Jays avenged an earlier 58-54 loss to UNO, winning 60-51, but lost to Northeast Missouri State, 60-52. Major said the highlight of the meet was the 400 meter freestyle relay, which Creighton won by six-tenths of one second over UNO.

The Jays then lost to Grinnel Jan. 28, 61-49, although Arts junior David Haller had two first-place finishes in diving.

The team's progress thus far has pleased Major. "We're doing a lot better than I had anticipated," he said.

He added that at the beginning of the season, a 4-11 record seemed reasonable. Now, he said the Jays will finish with at least as many wins as losses.

Major mentioned four of his swimmers as "consistent winners." They include Arts senior John Apker, an "all-purpose swimmer," who specializes in the 200 butterfly and 200 individual medley, and Mark Steinhafel, a business senior who Major said is an "excellent sprinter."

Also, he said Arts senior Pete Lamar is another quality all-purpose swimmer and John Ottersberg, Arts sophomore, "gives a lot of depth to the team."

However, Major said, "We really rely on second and third-place finishes to give us points, so everybody's important."

The girl's swim team, meanwhile, is still afloat, but has only seven members, Major said. "We have a lot of first places," he added, "but no depth."

Purse snatching incident reported near Deglman

The latest crime report includes a theft near Deglman Hall. At 10:44 p.m., a student reported that as she walked toward Deglman, an unknown black male approached her, demanded that she give him her money, pushed her and took her purse. Upon grabbing the purse, the suspect fled the campus area. The student returned to Deglman and called Public Safety.

A search of the area was conducted by Public Safety and the Omaha Police Department, but the suspect could not be located. The suspect was described as: a black male, approximately 24 years old, 5-8; wearing a brown leather coat, black pants, brown shoes, and a stocking cap.

The student was not injured in the robbery. Total value of the loss was $20.23, as the student had only 23 cents in her purse, which was valued at $20.

On Jan. 26 at 12:15 a.m., a student reported the theft of a knapsack containing a wallet and several other items from upper Brandeis while the student was eating dinner. Total value of the theft was $45.

On Jan. 28 at 3:55 p.m., a visiting Jesuit reported the theft of a wallet and currency from an unlocked locker at the Kiewit Center. Total value of the theft was $8.

On Jan. 29 at 5:55 p.m., a student reported the theft of a fieldjacket and tennis shoes from an unlocked locker at the Kiewit Center. Total value of the theft was $100.

On Jan. 30 at 6:53 p.m., a student reported the theft of four hubcaps from a vehicle parked in a lot near the Criss I building. Total value of the theft was $200.
