

PROFESSOR WINSOR C. MOORE

Professor Winsor C. Moore's retirement from the faculty of the School of Law to enter the practice of law in Colorado is an occasion for deep regret by faculty, students, and alumni. He began his teaching career at Creighton in 1946 and is completing his twenty-third year of continuous service at this University.

Professor Moore received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Central YMCA College, Chicago, Illinois in 1935. He then attended the George Washington University School of Law and received the Bachelor of Laws degree in 1937. In 1939 the Master of Laws degree was conferred on him by The Catholic University of America. And in 1949 he completed the work for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Business Administration at the University of Omaha while teaching in the Creighton University School of Law.

In connection with his teaching Professor Moore has been constantly engaged in legal research and writing. He has published many scholarly articles on a variety of legal subjects. His most significant work was the publication of the seven-volume treatise on Nebraska Practice, a work on methods of practice with procedural and business forms.

Professor Moore is a person of many interests. Among them he achieved a national reputation as an expert in the field of questioned documents and has written extensively in this field. He was also a member of the Academy of Forensic Sciences. In addition, he has developed and published his own teaching materials in the fields of Criminal Law and Accounting.

Professor Moore has earned the enduring respect and confidence of his students as a teacher and many sought his guidance and counsel. He has been one of the most popular instructors on the staff, and is remembered with great affection by hundreds of alumni. Professor Moore has rendered distinctive service to Creighton and to the legal profession. While we regret his departure from our ranks, we extend him our best wishes for success, happiness, and many years of service to our profession in the practice of law.
