● working your way? raising your own pay

So you are working your way through school! If you are, you aren't in the minority group. When you feel inclined to pat yourself on the back, or cry, "let this cup pass from me," remember that many others share your circumstances.

It is true that there are many disadvantages to working part or full time and taking a full load at school. Let us look into the dark side.

Money worries can greatly reduce mental efficiency. Many opportunities of educational advantages are missed because of required working time. Study time is often cut which usually results in lower grades.

The story is not without two sides however.

Possible advantages from part-time work would arise from the fact that the type of job might be related to academic interests. This type of work-study combination would benefit the student by affording a theory, plus experience background during school days. Even though a job is not related to major subjects in school, it still adds to the store of knowledge from experience. The ability to adapt oneself to the added responsibility is definitely an asset.

Combining work with school can be successful or disastrous, depending greatly on the individual in question. Some can carry the load easily, others struggle to do justice to both work and school, and some find the combination impossible.

Determination Is Key

One essential to undertaking work with study is determination. More and more students find they must work to meet the costs of an education. Five years ago it was uncommon to work and go to school simultaneously. Now however, the reverse is true. The working student is common these days. You aren't alone in the world if you are working to make ends meet.

It may be true that you aren't an "A" student, and you don't find time to study many things thoroughly, but added responsibility and the realization of the value of hard-earned money can do much to mold a strong character.

The ideal way to attend school is with an open mind, free from financial worries, and from working responsibilities. However, not all students can get an education the ideal way, and as it is with many other things in life, you can only profit as best you can, from any situation.

The United Press reported on Tuesday that three of the Iron Curtain countries in Europe have built up their military strength to sizes considerably over the limits set by the treaty ending World War II.

This report, which came from reliable American officials, stated that no official examination had been, or could be made, inasmuch as those countries prohibit the presence of Western citizens within their boundaries.

The countries mentioned were Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary. But the violations of the arms agreements are not localized to those countries. We have seen how much effect treaties have on these and other Communist-controlled countries. With the present foreign policies of those countries, it is impossible to ascertain the strength of their forces, and worse, there is no way to cause the reduction of those forces.

The alternative is, of course, to arm our own country to a parallel strength, in order to insure the prevention of an attack.

The Question

The question: Can the world continue living in a state of readiness to fight? Perhaps that condition may avert war, but it is not likely. Armament can be carried to indefinite limits.

In the face of this, actually what good are treaties? Thus far, they have served only as unconstructive signs of ceasing combat.

For many of the students on campus it is necessary to hold part time work in order to finance their education. Whether they can do justice to their studies and work at the same time is a debatable question. We realize that different students are capable of working under different conditions. Taking this into consideration the following students gave these answers:

Ed Bennett, A3, I think that a student can hold a part time job but that anything over 20 hours a week will definitely handicap his studies. Two or 3 hours a night and 8 to 10 on Saturday should not constitute any difficulty. Some students who need more time than others should avoid jobs if possible.

Wilma Bindel, A1, If the work isn't too demanding in that they can forget it when they leave their place of employment and that it doesn't take up too much of their time, it is possible.

Jim Bagley, A3, I think it all depends on the student and the job. The average person should be able to arrange his studies so that outside employment will not interfere. There is no doubt that everyone can use financial help while going to school.

A heated hassle has been progressing in Congress the past few weeks. The topic, "shall we give ourselves a pay hike?"

Members of the Senate and the House are now in the rather embarrassing position of voting to raise their own salaries. The bills that have been recommended thus far include a boost from $15,000 to $20,000; another bill suggests puffing the salary up to $27,500.

Vigorous Reaction

The public has always reacted vigorously and unfavorably to increases in Congressional pay and compensation. In 1873 during the Grant administration, the Forty-second Congress voted an increase from $5,000 to $7,500 retroactive to 1871. Howls of protest arose from the citizens. The pressurized Congress that followed repealed the bill.

In 1942 the public pulse reacted violently to the adoption of improved pensions and the legislature was attacked for enacting new prerequisites.

The Seventy-eighth Congress voted an expense account of $2,500 to supplement the $12,500 base pay. This legislation pertained only to representatives.

Many Expenditures

In the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 senators and representatives both received the expense account. Further legislation in 1953 established a flat $15,000 salary, and $3,000 of this could be claimed for Washington living expenses.

Citizens of the United States are resentful of this monetary self-legislation. They are also unaware of the tremendous expenditures of congressional members and inclined to over-evaluate the privileges and compensations extended to congressmen.

Footing the Expense?

Those "far reaching" and all engrossing privileges and compensations include the following:

They shall enjoy immunity from arrest in civil suits, any speech given in Congress may not be questioned in any other place, they determine their own rules in Congress and may discipline members for excesses.

Compensation includes stationery, clerk hire, salary, mileage and the postal frank. The salary has been mentioned. Congressmen are allowed 20 cents per mile travel expense to and from Washington once each session. An allowance for clerk hire is also possible. Official mail may be sent under postal frank free of charge. Contributory retirement plan is also in effect.

Living Costs Rise

The cost of living has increased some 20 per cent since the last pay raise in Congress. This alone should suffice for a substantial increase. Campaigns absorb money like blotters absorb ink.

The cost to the taxpayers for the top figure quoted in the pay promotion would be six million dollars a year, a drop in the bucket compared to some of our appropriations.

The law making body of the U. S. government should be amply paid. The duties are enormous, their pay, token in comparison. Most certainly the raise should be a compromise between their present $15,000 and the proposed $27,500. Perhaps a 20 per cent boost to compensate for the rise in the cost of living would be the answer.

Unbalanced Budget

Estimates say that it costs most congressmen $3,000 a year more than their regular federal salary.

The position is a precarious one. Trying to place a price tag on your own services is perplexing and always the brunt of unfriendly comments and unfair criticism. A pay raise may form a political weapon to be used in next year's election.

However this possibility should be disregarded and the Eighty-fourth Congress given a pay increase (self-imposed). The positions would consequently be more attractive and keener competition enskilled.

A reasonable increase seems both logical and practical. It should be spared the usual sneers, gripes, and selfish remarks.

● a cross in the classroom

All through history man has needed inspiration to work and fight for what he wanted and believed. He needs some tangible symbol to look to in the spirit of achievement or one to fall back on in the bitterness of discouragement and defeat.

Whether it was a coat of arms, a tattered flag, or a rippling banner, man has rallied round a chosen symbol to effect a victory. This victory could result from a battle for his family, his country, his religion, or even his self improvement.

Christians Inspired

Christians were inspired by the sign of the cross, emblematic of Christ's victory over Satan. This sacred symbol of love, courage, and hope carried Christians over rocky roads of bloody persecutions and is continuing to do so in the modern age of machines and atoms.

The school on the hilltop required inspiration for its ultimate realization of educating students. The Catholic principles of living are an integral part of this education. This institution was inspired and driven on to realize its ambitions by the emblem of the cross.

A dusty beam of light plays gently on the worn chairs. Shades of unknown vintage refuse entry to the sunshine outside. Creaking chairs and restless students harmonize in a low hum. A professor's voice overrides the noise.

Lacks Glamour

The room is close. A smell of chalk and textbook pages permeate the room. Unglamorous walls surround the students. The room is typical of Hilltop classroom. It's dull and unpretentious, a far cry from the beauty of modern design.

And yet the beauty is there for the room has inspiration. The inspiration radiates from the crucifix in the front of the classroom. The superficial beauty of materialism is absent but in its place is a symbol for students who are working to attain a goal.

Their goal is a Catholic education . . . their symbol, a cross in the classroom.

Housing is a problem which affects everybody, yet it is seldom recognized by those who are faced with it. As members of a society which by instinct and custom must live in some sort of enclosed environment it should interest you.

This article is an attempt to bring the problem close to the students of Creighton by using the homes they live in as specific cases. The names taken from the student directory will be changed to avoid embarrassment to the parties concerned.

Arts Major

The first of the three cases we are going to observe will deal with an arts major who we shall call Nick. Our appointment with Nick is at 5 p.m. in front of the Administration building.

On our way to Nick's we drive past the ruins of a governmentally financed veterans housing project. The tarpaper shacks had risen and fallen within a span of 9 years. They now serve only as ugly reminders that temporary housing was not the answer.

Nick is a married veteran who lives near downtown Omaha. The nearest outdoor recreational area is three miles from his home. A faraway playground for his offspring.

The flat he lives in is located directly over a grocery store and has only one entrance. This can only be approached through an alley way.

Near the stair lies an overturned garbage can. One must pick his way through litter to gain access to the apartment.

The stairs themselves are of a scaffold variety and are extremely dangerous in winter because of ice and snow.

Within the apartment itself the observer notices that most of the rooms are gloomy because of lack of outside lighting and that the heating system is inadequate due to the high ceilings and lack of weatherstripping around the single old fashioned window.

In general appearance the flat is kept immaculately clean, but the problem of rusting and frozen plumbing is a consistent headache to the lady of the house.

Landlord Generous

The interview with Nick's landlord, who gets 80 dollars a month for this five-room hut, showed a man who considered himself generous because he takes families with children. He also proudly announced that the building, which was built in 1920, was weathering beautifully.

Sadly enough, Nick's flat is not an exception and possibly would compare favorably to those of other urban dwellers living in the same tenement type of housing.

A summary of the apartment:

In observing the necessary facilities of this flat we have been using a standard set of codes set up by men who have worked in the field of social science. In general, the rules are used to distinguish just what is to be termed "adequate housing."

The phrase "adequate housing" has been in recent years shrouded in a mist of idealism and propaganda. Of course it could mean merely a place to live but from a practical point of view it must infer certain specific requisites.

Some of the less complex requirements would be:

1. Sufficient sunlight, which also includes a fresh air system of some kind.
2. Enough room—This is to be measured by the number of occupants to be served.
3. Easily controlled heating facilities—including weatherstripping and insulation to maintain a uniform temperature.
4. Plumbing facilities in fair shape.
5. More than one entrance to the home.

By reviewing our tour of Nick's apartment we can see that the building is lacking in most of the requirements and is not fit housing for human beings.

In next week's case we are literally going underground to view life in a "basement apartment."

● where's the conflict

There exists a possibility for a formal cease-fire in the Chinese conflict, according to London officials.

However, this cease-fire will not be negotiated by the United Nations. In the London report, the new Russian administration has considered forcing the Red government in Peiping to comply to a cease-fire agreement.

Chiang Kai-shek opposes a formal agreement engineered by the United Nations. In view of past experiences he does not believe that the Reds will comply with any U.N. decision. In short, he has no faith in the power of that organization.

In retrospect, we can see that the Chinese have been at war, either internally or defensively, for a great many years. This time the war, from outside appearances, is ideological. But is it actually?

As long as either side is fighting an ideological battle, the strong factions in back of each of those causes will continue to pour in money to aid them.

China is not a rich nation. She also has many millions of people to feed. And as it appears neither side wants to stop fighting. How come????

Promotions in Administration Are Revealed

In a memorandum issued to all administrators and faculty members, the Very Rev. Carl M. Reinert, S.J., president of the University, announced the following administrative changes.

'Finian's Rainbow' Is Spring Musical Set for April 28

"Finian's Rainbow" will be presented by Creighton university students as the spring musical. The dates for the production to be given in the auditorium are April 28 through 30 and again on May 1. Dean Graunke, dramatic art instructor, has the vehicle and is now looking for talent on the Hilltop.

Auditions for all talent will be held Monday, Feb. 28 from 8:30 to 10 p. m. and Tuesday, March 1 from 7 to 10 p. m. The auditions will be held in the university auditorium.

There are 30 speaking and singing parts open for the play. A dancing chorus of 10 boys and 10 girls is needed. There are also 10 parts available for Negro students in the musical.

The orchestra needs to be completed with several violinists, an oboe player and a flute player. Students interested in these particular parts should contact either Mr. Graunke or the Rev. Kermit Kennedy, S. J.

The musical comedy, "Finian's Rainbow," deals with gold, love, imagination and brotherhood. The action of the play takes place in Rainbow Valley, Missitucky, USA.

Students Select Princes, Princesses for 1955 Prom

Famous Band Picked to Play Spring Prom

Ralph Marterie and his orchestra has been contracted to play for the Junior-Senior Prom, April 15 at Peony. The Board of Governors signed the Marterie organization last week for $1,500.

The Marterie orchestra has gained a reputation of "always being on the go," as they play numerous road engagements. In addition to their personal appearances, the orchestra records for the Mercury label. One of their most recent efforts is an album entitled "Dance Date."

The policy of hiring a name band for the Prom was begun three years ago by the Board of Governors. The continuance of this practice is contingent upon the financial success of the Prom.

The total cost of the Prom this year will be approximately $2,000. This includes the cost of the orchestra, the rent on Peony, the expenses connected with the banquet and tea, and numerous smaller expenses. The Board hopes to offset the majority of the cost with ticket sales. The tickets for the Prom will cost $4 a couple.

Dance programs will be added to the Prom this year. The Board voted to eliminate the elaborate tickets formerly used for the Prom and put the money toward souvenir dance programs. The programs will be distributed to all girls at the dance.

The traditional banquet honoring king and queen Creighton candidates will be held at the Fontenelle Hotel previous to the Prom.

Students Request Help From Board In Parking Needs

Students of the medical and pharmacy schools requested help from the Board of Governors in solving their parking problems. Bill Cronin, P4, representing the students of the two schools, presented the problem to the Board at their meeting Monday night.

At the present time, the only parking space available to the students at 14th and Davenport are three hour meter zones and commercial lots. The result of this situation, according to Mr. Cronin, is that students receive numerous tickets. Some students have even had their cars impounded.

The problem is further aggravated by the fact that some students have consecutive classes on the Hill and then at the pharmacy school.

The Board decided to aid the students in attempting to solve the problem. Ken Kunce, P3, chairman of the student service committee of the board, was appointed to investigate the situation.

Coed Retreat Set From March 4 to 6

The annual retreat for Catholic coeds, with the Rev. William L. Rossner, S. J., as retreat master, will begin Friday, March 4, at 7:30 p. m. The retreat will continue all day Saturday and Sunday, March 5 and 6.

All Catholic girls, considered as full-time students in the colleges of arts, commerce, pharmacy and degree nursing, are obliged to attend unless they attended the voluntary retreat or the non-Catholic retreats held last semester. Part-time and non-Catholic coeds are welcome.

Anyone who is employed and is to make the retreat must arrange to be excused from work since employment is not accepted as an excuse for absence, according to Mrs. Maurine M. Hamilton, dean of women.

Any girl who has a problem regarding the retreat is asked by the dean of women to confer with her.

Needed! Snaps

The only way some students have of getting their picture in the annual is by informal snapshots. Some of these five year juniors just never get a graduation shot in the book.

So—any student or faculty member who has a good, clear snapshot of Hilltop activities is asked to donate them to the Bluejay staff. These will be used in the campus section of the annual.

This Week's

News in Review

Probably the most surprising event of the week came when Premier Georgi Malenkov of the Soviet Union bade farewell to his post, announcing himself a failure.

New Brain, Old Machine Almost immediately after his letter of resignation was read in the Kremlin, Nikita Khrushchev, secretary-general of the Communist party, recommended Nikolai Bulganin for the post. Nobody was fooled, however; it was evident that Khrushchev is now the "Brain Behind the Machine."

Evacuation Completed In the Formosa strait, the United States' Seventh Fleet completed the evacuation of the Tachen islands. By Sunday, the Reds had occupied the Tachens. Earlier in the week, Congress approved a treaty with the Chinese Nationalists to defend Formosa and the Pescadore.

Try, Try Again In France, Wednesday, Socialist Christian Pineau announced that he would draw up new cabinet to present to the French National Assembly today for approval. The would-be Premier, from all reports, has a surprisingly good chance to become the first Socialist Premier in nine years and the head of the twenty-first French government since the war. Such an event would end the government's 15 day crisis since Mendes-France resigned.

Statehood in Sight Hawaii and Alaska may become states yet. The House Interior committee approved, 19-6, a double statehood bill for those territories. Spotters on the Job But Cupid Hits Target Ain't love wonderful? The civil defense ground observer corps in San Francisco doesn't agree. It seems that there is a beautiful view of the Golden Gate bridge and San Francisco bay from all the spotter points.

It is not to be inferred that the spotters aren't doing their duty. But, with a view like that . . .

Mrs. Pauline Gale, head of the San Francisco ground observer corps, reports that there have been three marriages among the spotters recently. She also added, "I can see two more coming up—and it isn't even spring yet."

Article is Printed by Scot Journal

An article entitled "Television and the Teacher," written by the Rev. R. C. Williams, S. J., director of communication arts, was printed in the January issue of the "Don Bosco Journal."

The Journal is published by the Guild of Catholic Teachers, in Glasgow, Scotland.

Father Williams asked the Catholic teachers to cooperate when an occasion arises to help television grow to "a healthy maturity." He also suggested that the exchange of television programs between nations would be an effective means for helping restore the unity of mankind.

Father Williams was also quoted as preferring American to British TV "because the advertisers' interests keep it clean." The quotation was by Percy C. Knott in a column called "Britain in Brief," that appeared in the Feb. 12 issue of Tide, an advertising trade journal.

Behind The Scenes

By Jim Schwertley

When Marquette's Golden Avalanche thundered West, carrying in its wake the prestige of 16 cage victims, their position was akin to that of the gunfighters of the Old West.

In the lore of our West, when a gunslinger made a reputation for himself, he would likely spend the rest of his days slapping leather. Every wet eared upstart from Laredo, Texas to Great Falls Montana would want a crack at him. In the sports winning streak, the life and death element is missing. (Or is it?)

Giant Killers

When a team establishes a winning streak, every opponent on the schedule may rise to fiery heights in an effort to knock off the big shots. They can't be giants themselves, so they strain to be giant killers.

Kentucky's twin defeats at the hands of lightly regarded Georgia Tech shows the heights to which an underdog can rise in an effort to duplicate David's biblical feat. So when Marquette brought its reputation to town, Creighton was ready for them.

Creighton rose to the greatest heights of the season, playing the ninth ranking team in the nation on even terms for 38 minutes.

Only their youthful eagerness defeated them. Cashing in on 40 to 49 free throw attempts, the poised campaigners from Milwaukee doused the hot Bluejay threat and moved on.

But like the old gunfighters, their streak will come to an end sooner or later. They can't stay at a high mental and physical peak for every contest. Their glory hungry opponents can.

Loyolans Stop Cold Bluejays

The Creightons ran out of gas last Saturday night against Loyola of Chicago.

Soon after the game started, it was evident that the peak achieved against Marquette had not carried over against Loyola. The Jay attack sputtered somewhat in the first half, but they managed to leave the floor with a 41 to 39 margin over the veteran Ramblers.

Sharp Interlude

For the first five minutes of the second half, the Jays played alert ball, increasing their lead to nine points. This burst turned out to be a dying gasp, for the Ramblers took command from then on.

The Loyolans gathered momentum, pouring in 12 straight points at one time while the Jays were being blanked. This sizzling streak boosted their margin to 81 to 63. From there, they coasted in to a 90 to 68 margin.

The main factor contributing to the Loyola domination was their consistency in cashing free throws.

Hot Free Throwers

Their marksmen pocketed an amazing 34 out of 38 charity attempts. Hilltop record keepers could find no performance in the history of Creighton basketball to equal it.

Bob Gibson was high man for Creighton with 25 points. He also turned in a sterling floor game. Eddie Cole was held to 12 points by close Loyola guarding.

Ed Stube of Loyola grabbed scoring honors for the evening with 26 markers.

J. Murphy, Beck Top Faculty Loop

Jackie Murphy rolled the high game in the ladies' division of faculty bowling Monday night. In spite of her successful 157 point score in the second round, though, the "Execs" accomplished a three-game shut-out against her "Jaysters" team to tie for first place.

Top honors among the men were captured by Don Beck when he felled the pins for a 185 point high game and a high series of 517. Mr. Beck was bowling for the "Unknowns" team.

Blues Near Season's End; Drake OU Left

Coach Subby Salerno and his team have traveled a rocky road this season. Only two games remain on the 19-game schedule, a Hilltop date tomorrow night with Drake University and the finale with Omaha U next Thursday. Salerno is drilling his men hard this week in an effort to improve on the season record of 4 wins and 13 losses.

The 1954-1955 Bluejays, spiked with several freshman players, have played good and bad basketball. One of the impressive performances the Jays turned in was the first game with Drake.

In that game, the favored Bulldogs had to fight to the last second to eke out an 82 to 79 victory.

Willie Tough

Six foot six inch Willie Cerf of Drake, who bagged 30 points and grabbed almost as many rebounds in the previous encounter, will be a marked man tomorrow night.

The long Creighton-Drake series is one of the finest in basketball from the standpoint of closeness of competition. In the 52 games played, Creighton has won 28 of them. Drake, though, has held pretty much the upper hand in recent years.

Most of the games have been hotly contested affairs. If Salerno can whip his team to the peak they have attained a few times this season, this game should also be a thriller.

Coach Jack McClelland of Drake has high respect for Creighton's dynamic duo, Eddie Cole and Bob Gibson.

High Praise

After the last meeting, when Cole hit 26 points and Gibson 23, McClelland remarked, "Cole is the best shot I have ever seen, and Gibson is almost as dangerous."

The Omaha U game will be played at the West Dodge Fieldhouse. This appears to be the best chance the Indians have had in years to break the Jay jinx that has produced 15 straight Creighton victories in the series.

The previous game this year resulted in a 61 to 59 Creighton squeeze. The Indians though, have won over half their games this year, and will be smoking for revenge when they face the Bluejays.

They have two potent scorers in Ed Baker and Bob Mackie and several good rebounders.

These two games will be the final appearances in Bluejay uniforms for seniors Eddie Cole, Hugh Manhart and Frank Gollon.

Sports World

The mile run continues as the focal point of interest of the indoor track season with Bill Dwyer, Wes Santee, and Gunnar Nic'son running a grudge race each week.

Santee and Nielson set too a blistering pace in last Saturday's Baxter Mile and burned themselves out before they reached the three-quarter mark, allowing Dwyer to win by 65 yards. His time was 4:06.2—far short of Nielson's indoor record of 4:03.6 but fast enough to be the record for the meet.

The speedy trio will meet again in the AAU games tomorrow.

The Montreal Canadians are convincing a lot of people that they are the best team in the National Hockey League.

Not only are they ahead in the standing, but in scoring as well. And in the race for individual scoring honors, the top five men are members of the Montreal team.

Minnesota and Iowa have narrowed the quest for the Big Ten crown down to a two way race.

The Gophers kept their conference lead intact by coming from behind to beat Illinois, 78-71, in the second overtime while the Hawkeyes roared to a 90-75 win over Indiana last Saturday. The outcome of these two games established Iowa as the undisputed second-place occupant.

Monday night, the Gophers downed Indiana, 80-70, and the Hawkeyes won over Ohio State, 79-68.

Dan Simon . . . Always a top effort.

Dan Simon's Hustle Sparks Jays Through Rocky Year

Ability combined with hustle is all that any coach can ask for in a player.

Six foot two inch forward Dan

Simon has these things in generous quantities. As a freshman last year, Dan was one of the bulwarks of a fine yearling team. This year moved into the starting varsity lineup and has improved with each game.

In high school, Dan was an all city and all state selection while playing for Creighton Prep. He was one of the top scorers in the state in his last two years.

Dan reached his peak this year in the Loyola game. Although the team showing was underpar, Dan was a ball of fire. He bagged 12 points and was a demon under the boards, grabbing 11 rebounds.

Dan ranks fourth among Bluejay scorers this year with 115 points in 16 games, an average of 7.2.

Coach Subby Salerno calls Dan a real hustler. "He can always be counted on to give out with a top effort," Salerno says.

Dan has a fine jump shot and also fires accurately from a pivot. In addition to his other assets, he is fast, making him a good man to have around on drive-in or fast break plays.

Two Cousins Meet After the Game

When Jesuit schools get together on the athletic field, the meeting might be thought of as sort of a family reunion.

In the case of Creighton and Loyola, this was certainly true. The Loyola coach George Ireland and the Rev. William F. Kelley, S. J., dean of the arts college at Creighton, are cousins.

The two men had time for a short "get-together" following the game.

A brother of the Loyola coach, the Rev. Raymond Ireland, S. J., is a well known Jesuit mission band speaker. He recently conducted the student retreat at Creighton.

COLLEGE QUIRKS

By Denny McGuire

This week's column will be about familiar persons in the news room, and it has to be succinctly written, says the editor of big town, Steve Ramsey, the two-fisted crime-buster of the Illustrated Creightonian.

When I was selected sports editor they thought I would quit writing my column, however, that didn't stop me. In fact, I have enough words left in my vocabulary to last for two more weeks.

My first move upon becoming sports editor was to establish connections with all the wire services (grey service) in the country. I had planned to bring to the students a special service, a numbers game, direct from the track during the racing season. I contacted noted sports racing authority Bill Fogarty and engaged him as my roving bookmaker.

Horse Sense

This unique service would allow the students to mail in their selections with small investments enclosed. Upon winning they would be given a small scholarship to aid their college education.

Unfortunately my associate, Clark Kent Schwertley, took me aside and informed me that the plan I had proposed was illegal.

Peculiar fellow this Schwertley. He comes from Gotham City. I went over to his house the other day and asked his mother if I could speak to him. She said yes, but I would have to wait. Butch was practicing with the piano. I asked her if she didn't mean "on the piano." She said, "No, with the piano." Sure enough, when I went into the living room, he was practicing with the piano, doing pushups with it.

Mild Mannered Reporter

Strong chap, this Schwertley. I asked Butch (who was formerly Mr. Omaha and who writes a weekly serial on weightlifting in the Creightonian), "How come you are so strong, Butch?" Well, he told me.

It seems that when he was young, he was an underdeveloped child. The only exercise he did every day was to breathe, and that tired him. Gradually he increased exercise until the blue color left his face.

Each morning he would wake up, open his eyelids by himself, and lift the heavy bedclothes off his body. Every day he increased his exercise. Soon, he could lift the winter blankets off himself. Later, he became strong enough to open the window, which aided his breathing exercise.

Gone With the Wind

One day, he went down town,

Fr. Blum's Review On Recent Book Appears in Journal

The current issue of the "Georgetown Law Journal" contains a 28-page book review-article by the Rev. Virgil C. Blum, S. J., assistant professor of political science.

Father Blum's article is a lengthy review of Leo Pfeffer's recent book entitled "Church, State, and Freedom." The book contains excerpts from court decisions and historical materials on many of the important issues arising out of questions and problems of religious freedom and separation of church and state.

Involves the Individual

The church-state problem in America, according to Father Blum, "involves the right of the individual citizen to engage in the exercise of religion without being deprived of equal rights under the law."

He writes that this problem "must be solved on the basis of the religious liberty guarantee of the First Amendment."

Of prime importance in a discussion of church-state problems is objectivity. Father Blum's review states that author Leo Pfeffer fails to give these delicate matters this required objective treatment.

(involuntary, there was a strong wind) and blew into a tattoo shop. Butch was so thin that the man placed the tattoo "Mother" on the window, pressing skinny Butch up against the pane. He traced the tattoo right through transparent Butch. The tattooer couldn't write the word "mother" on Butch's chest. There wasn't enough room, so he wrote "Ma" vertically.

That was the day Butch made a vow. Some day he would come back and get the rest of the tattoo he paid for. The plan for changing "ma" to "mother" became a formula. Change the "a" to "o" and add "ther."

Superman

After years and years of work Butch came back to the tattooer and demanded the rest of his tattoo. When Butch took off his shirt, and his blue undershirt with the large "S" on it, the man was astounded. He then had room to write "grandmother" across Butch's chest, horizontally. This time it was different, the tattooer traced it onto Butch's chest through the tissue paper.

Dr. Begley Talks to Bankers

Dr. John P. Begley, professor of accounting in Creighton commerce school spoke Tuesday to the Omaha and Council Bluffs conference bank auditors and controllers.

Members Find 'Honesty Best Policy'

Eight years ago a distinguished and unique club was formed in Omaha. It was named the George Washington club.

The uniqueness of this club lies in the requirement for membership. The members must meet two qualifications. First, they must find a purse or a billfold containing money and return it to the owner; and second, they must be under 15 years of age. At 15 they are retired!

A luncheon is held each year to give these honest youngsters a pat on the back, the Saturday before George Washington's birthday.

Fr. Reinert Guest Speaker

Guest speakers at this year's luncheon to be held at the Fontenelle hotel tomorrow noon, are:

Professor Anderson Addresses Thomist Club

Creighton's Thomist club will meet this afternoon in the board room at 4 p. m.

Chester G. Anderson, assistant professor of English, will speak on the historical aspects of the controversy between art and morality.

It will be an attempt to fuse the two departments on one subject.

W. B. Millard, Jr., president of the Omaha National bank; Henry C. Karpf, vice-chairman of the Omaha National bank; Mary Gleeson, advertising manager of the Omaha National bank; the Very Rev. Carl M. Reinert, S.J., president of Creighton university; Dr. William H. Thompson, dean of the college of arts and sciences, Omaha university, and Frank Fogarty, president of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

Another unique feature of the event is the fact that the speakers do not speak. (This fact would be most welcomed at many dinners, luncheons and honorary banquets.)

Entertainment

At this luncheon, entertainment will be provided by Warren Peper, organist, and Huntington the Magician. Lyle DeMoss, general manager of WOW-radio will emcee the party.

The traditional cherry pie will be served as dessert.

Club procedures are handled through all the schools in Omaha, both public and parochial. Presentation of the membership card, George Washington pin, and a billfold from the Omaha National bank is usually made during class time by the teacher.

A third sorority is in the making at Creighton. There have been three meetings to discuss the sorority, and an average of 12 girls would be needed to form one. It is necessary to organize the girls now in order to form a sorority next spring.

This was one of the subjects discussed on "KOCU's Take the Stand," Wednesday evening at 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Hamilton, dean of women, was the faculty representative. The topics discussed were sororities and the girl's dormitory at Creighton.

Before the discussion got under way, Mrs. Hamilton was asked to give a run down of her responsibilities here at Creighton. Mrs. Hamilton, as dean of women is responsible for the counselling and the welfare of the coed here at Creighton.

She is in charge of housing for all coeds, and therefore has charge of the girls dormitories. She teaches sociology and education courses, and is secretary of the Student Life committee, Student Recruitment committee and the Student Publications committee.

In regard to sororities, Mrs. Hamilton said that "A sorority fulfills a girl's desire for social life. In order to belong a girl must send a preference letter to the Dean of Women, she must be a full-time student and she must have a C average."

The average cost of belonging is between $40 and $60 dollars. The average number of girls to a sorority is about 50 members.

Mrs. Hamilton mentioned the special event that took place last week for the two sororities at Creighton. A pledge dinner and dance was held at the Fontenelle hotel last Friday.

This is an annual affair.

Now, the girl's dormitories at Creighton are patterned after sorority houses. There are approximately 20 girls in each dormitory. A housemother or proctor is in charge of the house, and a house committee is chosen among the girls every semester.

Other members on the panel were Jane Nielson, A1, Joy Berheimer, A1, and Ed Vitzhum, A1. The topic for this Week's discussion on Take the Stand will be Athletics at Creighton. "Duce" Belford, Athletic Director and director of intramurals, will be the faculty representative for the Show.

No Dice in Sight But . . . He Lost His Shirt

All the thrills and memories of homecoming, 1954, have been filed safely away. The surge of studenthood has subsided for another year. The 1955 edition is merely in the thought stage.

In the coolish December festivities, some gone guy must have worked himself up to a fever pitch. At any rate he shed his pretty plaid shirt in the stadium, "permanently." The garment was found by a "shirt spotter" and is in his possession at this writing.

If the lad without the plaid is cold, regretting his loss, or still wondering what became of his shirt, he may get information in the Creighton news room leading to its recovery.

We have been assured by the present owner that the almost new shirt will be happily returned (it doesn't fit him). If the owner will kindly claim his garment this shirt tale will end.
