AT&T donates $200,000 in computer equipment

In association with its University Equipment Donation Project, AT&T has donated $200,000 in computer equipment and programs to Creighton University, it was announced Monday.

James Ault, director of Information Services, said the school will receive three Unix System V computers, 12 high-resolution color graphics terminals and various software packages.

Ault said the health sciences schools and the math and computer science departments will benefit most from the gift.

One of the System V computers will be dedicated to research on artificial intelligence in health sciences, Ault said.

It will also allow more hospitals and universities to use Creighton's existing artificial intelligence system-system that assists health-care professionals in decision making, he said.

The other two System V computers will be used by the math and computer science departments, which will be able to switch over most of their teaching and research activities, Ault said.

"The big advantage of Unix is that it gives you the ability to write applications and transfer them easily to other systems," Ault said. "That's its overwhelming attribute-its portability from system to system."

This flexibility should allow the school to shop for the best bargains rather than be tied to a certain brand when buying new equipment, Ault said.

The gift will added to the three-year-old Campaign for Creighton, a fund-raising effort that has raised $77.3 million as of mid-October.

University officials said they hope to raise $20 million more over the next two years.

Forty-five students, six adults

Fifty-one new members selected for honor society

By Cheryl Galvin
Reporter

Forty-five Creighton University students and six adult honorary members will be inducted into the Student and Alumni chapters of Alpha Sigma Nu, the National Jesuit Honor Society Saturday at 4:15 p.m.

The ceremony will be in the Walsh Lecture Hall.

Alpha Sigma Nu was founded at Marquette University in Milwaukee in 1915 to honor some students for their scholastic achievement, service to others and loyalty.

Creighton formed its chapter in 1921.

Students from all nine colleges were nominated by faculty members and deans' offices in early fall, according to Noel Landuyt, president of the student chapter.

Students being inducted this year are from the College of Arts and Sciences, Jeffrey D. Berglund, John Blair, Nancy A. Chmiel, Roger W. Early, Michelle M. Eich, Tressa A. Horacek, Gina I. Jabro, Steven J. Kern.

Patricia M. Kusek, Angela E. Martin, Michelle A. Mauck, Patrick R. McGill, John M. Miller, Susan I. Mullin, Timothy J. Stockert, Barren W. Swett, Leslie Swinerton, Megan E. Temp, Lisa A. Zimmerman.

From the College of Business Administration, Paul Anderson, Annmarie Benschoter, Lynn Berding, William Flanery, Elizabeth A. Martin, Brian C. Rolf, Reyna E. Sakamoto, Michael S. Van Erdwyk.

From the School of Nursing, Deborah Ellis, David McGuire; from the School of Medicine, Andrew T. Gentile, Daniel H. Hu.

From the School of Dentistry, David W. Haines, David H. Hanson, Thomas J. Weber; from the University College, Randy C. Brown, Patricia A. Malcolm.

From the School of Law, Elizabeth Heine, Keith P. Larsen, David H. Reinmiller, John Searle, Michael J. Weaver, Mary J. Wolfe.

From Pharmacy/Occupational Therapy, Beverly A. Hunter, Wendal G. Speake, Laura J. Sunde; from the Graduate School, Jane C. Carroll.

The Student Chapter will induct as honorary members the Rev. Edward Mathie, S.J., Director of Campus Ministry at Creighton and Dr. Michael G. Lawler, Ph.D., Dean of the Creighton Graduate School.

Creighton also inducts adult honorary members each year.

The Alumni Chapter this year will induct the Rev. Edward Sharp, S.J., a retired math and computer science professor at Creighton.

Dr. Leo Ambrose, DDS, an Omaha dentist; Nebraska Supreme Court Justice John Grant; and Louise Monaco Cimino of Omaha, the 1985 National American Mother of the Year.

Membership in the organization is for life and student members become part of the alumni chapter upon graduation, Landuyt said.

Following the ceremony, the honorees and their guests will attend a reception and banquet in the Student Center Ballroom.

New newsroom and lab dedication set for Monday

The computerized Hitchcock Newsroom and Writing/Design Teaching Laboratory in the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication will be dedicated Monday.

Richard A. Curtis, managing editor for graphics and photography at USA Today, will be on hand.

Curtis will spend part of the morning working with Creighton journalism students. In the afternoon, he will work with area high school editors and their advisers, who are being invited to visit the newsroom and lab at Creighton.

The computer writing and publishing facilities were made possible by a 100,000 gift to the Campaign for Creighton from the Gilbert M. and Martha Hitchcock Foundation.

The newsroom and lab are equipped with approximately 20 microcomputer editing stations and typesetting equipment. The student newspaper, The Creightonian, has been published this semester using the equipment.

Creighton instructors and administrators, along with representatives of the Hitchcock Foundation and the University's Board of Directors, will be guests at an 11:15 a.m. dedication ceremony at the newsroom and lab, located in the Hitchcock Communication Arts Building.

The ceremony will be followed by a luncheon.

Research team finds control of blood pressure is related to improved kidney function

A Creighton Medical Center research team has found that better control of high blood pressure may improve kidney function. Control of blood pressure may also stop the progression of kidney disease in patients suffering from hypertension-related kidney disease.

The team's findings are a result of a long-term study of 23 adult patients with a disease called hypertensive nephrosclerosis. Nephrosclerosis is the hardening of the kidney and its arteries. This disease reduces the kidney's ability to filter impurities--including sodium--from the blood.

These findings oppose earlier animal studies that suggest the progression of renal disease is inevitable once kidney damage begins, Dr. William Pettinger, head of the research team said.

It is estimated that at least 20 percent and possibly 80 percent of the patients who have kidney dialysis done are found to have hypertension-related kidney disease, Pettinger said.

He suspects that the study's findings may also be applied to renal damage associated with other causes such as diabetes. But it has not yet been proven scientifically.

The research further defines the interrelationship between high blood pressure and kidney disease, Pettinger said.

"Most researchers believe that there is a mechanism in the kidney that causes the kidney to retain too much salt, thereby causing high blood pressure," he said. "Initially, the kidney functions okay. But over time, the high blood pressure causes damage to the kidneys, and that damage is directly related to the severity of hypertension."

The team's findings could result in significantly lower medical costs by reducing the need for kidney dialysis. The research also showed a decrease in the amount of antihypertensive drugs needed as the patients' kidney function improved.

The Midwest Hypertension Research Institute opened in the fall at Creighton Medical Center. Funding came from the Health Future Foundation of Omaha.

The foundation was established in 1984 to manage a multi-million dollar endowment that helps support research and academic programs at the Medical Center.

Before coming to Creighton, Pettinger and his research team were associated with the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas. Studies involving the 23 patients with hypertensive nephrosclerosis were conducted at the University of Texas.

SBG allocates $3,000

Renovations for student organization space approved

By Shannon O'Neill
SBG Reporter

The Student Board of Governors has approved the allocating of $3,000 for the renovations of the student organization space in the Student Center.

"The renovation occurred because we have over 80 clubs and only 12 cubicles," Cradick said.

There was no general workspace where organizations could make posters or store files she said.

After receiving input from the Student Center Advisory Board, SBG, and the SBG Program Board, Cradick said she worked with Jim Talcott of Raders Office Design Co. on different plans.

The plan needed to be an "efficient design utilizing the space to its fullest potential," she said.

The approved design moved all the cubicles to the perimeter of the room. Space was left in the middle of the room for a large utility table.

The new structure gives each organization its own space without isolating it, Cradick said.

"It hopefully will encourage communication between groups," she said.

Each club on campus was sent an application for cubicle space, Cradick said. A group of students and staff will select which groups are granted space.

Groups must apply for a space every year. This gives each group repeated opportunities to get a cubicle space, Cradick said.

Included in the student organization space will be a resource room. This will allow organizations to utilize paper, markers and other supplies, Cradick said. It will be open from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

FAF forms to be sent over break

The Financial Aid Office will be mailing the 1989-1990 Financial Aid Form (FAF) out over Christmas break to all current recipients.

Students must reapply each year using the FAF.

The FAF must be completed as soon after Jan. 1, 1989 as possible. Priority awarding goes to students if the office receives the form by April 1.

Creighton requires a copy of parents' and student's 1988 tax return.

No awards can be given until these tax returns are received and reviewed by the office.

Additional instructions including information on College Work Study and loan counseling is included in the FAF.

A signature page which indicates that the student received and reviewed the booklet will be included in the form. This page must be returned to the financial aid office as soon as possible.

The new Student Loan Information Center (SLIC) is located in the Student Center. Services include FAF form completion help, loan debt projections, and loan repayment options.

All services are free to students.

Leadership America seeks applicants for program

Leadership America, a national leadership development opportunity for undergraduates, is seeking applicants for its third summer session. Students who have completed their junior year of undergraduate studies by June 9, 1988 can apply.

Fifty undergraduates from around the country will be invited to participate in the ten-week program. This summer's session takes place between June 9, 1988 and August 17, 1989. The primary criteria for selection is that the student have an "outstanding potential for leadership."

Leadership America includes one week in North Carolina, and a week in the Rocky Mountains and three weeks in Dallas, Texas. It also includes a four-week internship in business, government, or community service. The closing session is in Washington, D.C.

Barbara Meister, a fifth year senior at UNL, participated in the program last summer.

"The Leadership America program was developed out of the recognition that young people will face leadership challenges earlier in their careers, and they need to be prepared and equipped with the necessary leadership skills to face an increasingly complex world," Meister said.

Meister will be on campus on Monday, from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in the Student Center, Rm. 104. A video will be shown about the program and questions will be answered.

"Creighton students have applied for this outstanding program each year but we have not had anyone accepted yet," Martha Brown, associate dean of students said. "This is our year!"

New oxygen therapy method benefits lung disease patients

A new form of oxygen therapy can improve mobility, increase exercise tolerance and enhance the self-image of patients with chronic obstructive lung disease, according to a Creighton University Medical Center study.

The results of the study appeared in the November issue of the Journal of Cardiopulmonary Rehabilitation.

This is the most controlled and detailed study to date on transtracheal oxygen therapy, according to Dr. Walter O'Donohue, Jr., chairman of the department of medicine and the study's chief investigator.

"We are encouraged by our results and so are the patients. There isn't one of our patients using transtracheal oxygen therapy who wants to discontinue it. We've had 100 percent patient acceptance," O'Donohue said.

Traditional oxygen therapy requires the patient to wear tubes in the nose and around the ears and neck, as well as carry a bulky oxygen canister when outside the home.

With transtracheal oxygen therapy, the tubes are hidden under a patient's clothing with a small, flexible catheter passing through a small opening in the lower neck and into the trachea.

Patients require less oxygen with this new method and thus can carry lightweight, compact oxygen containers with over-the-shoulder straps.

Fifteen patients with a mean age of 60 participated in the six-month study.

When compared to traditional oxygen therapy, the transtracheal method proved to be a more efficient way of getting oxygen to the lungs. Study participants required 42 percent less oxygen when resting and 21 percent less oxygen during exercise.

Exercise tolerance improved an average of 23 percent when measured by treadmill walking time.

The researchers suggested that the improvement in cardiovascular fitness was an indirect benefit of the therapy. They said that the improvement most likely was due to the patient's improved self-image, which encouraged them to lead more active lifestyles and thus increase their exercise tolerance.

Study participants reported improved appetites in addition to a more positive self-image.

Program to assist secondary school faculty development and education starts today

By Wendy Koster
Reporter

A Creighton University effort to assist in secondary school faculty development and continuing education has resulted in the creation of the Metro Area Teachers' Institute (MATI), the first such program in Omaha.

"It (MATI) is not intended to replace formal undergraduate or graduate education, or even to totally eliminate individual district programs," said Dr. David Higginson, Assistant Academic Vice President at Creighton and chairman of the MATI Board of Directors.

"It is meant to enhance both."

The goal of MATI is to help coordinate and expand secondary school faculty development and continuing education through the centralization of related programs and pooling of resources from participating school districts and Creighton, according to Higginson.

An inaugural program to mark the beginning of the Program is scheduled for today at 3:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom.

MATI Board members, as well as teachers, administrators and curriculum coordinators from participating schools.

Those attending will be able to tour the Creighton campus and take part in specialized group discussion sessions in various disciplines.

MATI is an outgrowth of Creighton's Partners in Excellence Program, a collaborative effort on the part of the University and 25 Omaha area secondary schools.

The MATI program policy will be set by a Board of Directors of administrators from the Ralston Public Schools, Westside High School, the Council Bluffs Public Schools, Creighton Prep, the Omaha Public Schools, and Creighton.

Omaha's Catholic high schools are also participating in MATI.

The University will provide classrooms, equipment and secretarial services.

Special programs for secondary school teachers, will be determined by the MATI Board, Higginson said. Speakers and faculty for such programs will be drawn from Creighton, participating school districts, or elsewhere as the demand for expertise and availability dictate.

In addition, Higginson said, participants in seminars and workshops at Creighton will become University Fellows during the time in which they are enrolled, providing them with use of the University's libraries and other research facilities.

Helpers needed for scout program

"For the Boy Scouts, the new meaning of exploring is one of career investigation," Elizabeth J. Moffatt, Exploring executive with the Mid-America Council of Boy Scouts of America said.

"Despite the organization's male title, Exploring is a coed operation," Moffatt said. "The kids love it, community leaders love it, and we definitely need student volunteers to help us coordinate the many and varied activities ranging from accounting to zoology."

Moffatt outlined the program, saying that Exploring is:

A career counseling program, a career development program that has professionals from various fields as teachers, an involved, hands-on learning opportunity, a coeducational program for young men and women ages 14 to 20.

Moffatt said that Explorer Posts, the career contact groups, meet twice a month to learn about a professional area.

The Rev. Michael G. Morrison, S.J., president of Creighton University, is the chairman of the Metro Omaha Exploring program.

"This would be a good opportunity for students to both help young persons get a start in the world and also to make contact with the local corporate and civic institutions," Morrison said.

"Student volunteers helping us with this program will significantly improve our career promotion efforts with young persons," Moffatt said. "Teens often relate better to persons who are closer to their age level."

Creighton students and organizations who are interested in further information about Boy Scout Explorer Career Posts may contact Moffatt at 341-2086. Deadline for applying as a volunteer is Dec. 15.

Some Thanksgiving break wisdom

With age comes wisdom, and after my fourth Thanksgiving break, that phrase finally means something to me.

There are usually only two reasons why I'm so anxious to get home for Thanksgiving. For one, it gives me a chance to eat like a normal human, and secondly, to see some friends.

But this break was much more important to me for some reason. I didn't spend a lot of time sleeping, as I usually do, but thinking, which is something I don't usually do.

Maybe I'm alone in my thoughts but judge for yourself.

I wonder how much money Creighton students have donated to the Iowa State Patrol during trips through that state.

You can always tell when breaks are getting long when you become a regular at the video store.

After four years, the Husker-Sooner game still doesn't mean a thing to me.

My uncle is a big Chicago Bulls fan so he named his son Michael Jordan. Four years ago, I would have called his baby "Air" in disrespect. But I've aged and matured, so I'll probably buy the kid a Miami Heat jersey instead.

When you go home for break, don't you realize that the idiot friends you had in high school are just idiot friends who are now in college?

Aren't the good looking girls in high school now a little shabby and the ugly ones in high school are looking rather fine?

The person voted "Most Likely to Succeed" in high school took your order at a burger joint.

You see how the kids in high school

By Kevin Sarver

are acting and hope you didn't act like that.

You spend three hours at the favorite watering hole only to wake up the next day and realize you were flirting with your high school english teacher.

Anyone who orders a regular beer instead of light is now categorized as a "party animal."

You feel good about graduating in four years because most of your friends are on the six or seven-year undergraduate plan.

Anyone who carries more than $25 on a night out is stupid because he will end up buying the final four rounds.

Your little cousin starts talking about love and relationships and you listen, just hoping to learn something.

Sleeping is much more important than the football games after Thanksgiving dinner.

And, finally, all of the wisdom you have gained through the four years of college life leads you to believe that maybe your parents weren't wrong all of the time.

Nah!

"IN THE EARLY DAYS OF FLYING, WHO'D HAVE THOUGHT THAT SOME DAY AIR TRAVEL WOULD BE SO COMPLETELY SCREWED UP?"

Fans By Art Buchwald

You see them on television holding their fingers in the air and sticking their tongues out, and you wonder where they come from.

They're the fans that the cameras pan to between football plays. They are the people who make everything about TV sports worthwhile.

"How do sports fans qualify for a sound bite at the football game?" I asked Bill Pearson, whom you probably saw in the final quarter of the Redskins-Bears game. Aw, come on, don't say you've forgotten him.

He was the fellow in the Redskins knit hat, who waved his arms up and down and yelled, "Hi, Mom" into the camera.

Everyone was talking about it the next day.

I accidentally ran into Bill on the corner of 16th and K streets in Washington, D.C., where he was mobbed by autograph seekers.

"You were fantastic," I told him. "I thought that the fans were going to go crazy when you jumped on to your seat to declare that the Redskins were Number One."

Bill blushed modestly. "Everyone was great. You can't do a good job on TV without the little people behind you - the directors, the cameramen and the scriptwriters, not to mention the network vice presidents who had the faith to put me on the screen knowing I had a sore throat.

I'd also like to thank my grandmother Quayle who told me many years ago, when I revealed to her my dream of appearing on TV, 'You can do anything you want if you just put your mind to it.'"

"You were lucky to have had such a wise grandmother," I told him. "But in the long run you were the one who did it. What gave you the idea to declare that the Redskins were Number One?"

"I'd been thinking about doing it for some time. In the game before the Bears I had noticed that the number three camera was panning closer and closer toward me. So it dawned on me last week that I better be prepared just in case.

I had several options, including waving my Redskins banner or even my hot dog. But I decided to fool them with the old we-are number-one play. As soon as the red light went on I was ready.

"You certainly were. I never saw a football fan who was so believable on television."

"In order for the cameraman to get the full shot, I had to push down Arnie Blauvelt who was in the row in front. He isn't talking to me."

"People are still talking about that unforgettable moment when you looked straight into the camera and yelled, 'Hi, Mom, I'll be home for dinner.' That was inspired and I don't think the viewers expected it."

"My mom's been good to me and she deserved the recognition," Bill said.

Not only did she deserve it, but it was so real that everyone had the feeling that she was putting the roast beef in the oven. Did she know that you would be on?"

"There were no guarantees, but I did tell her to be sure and watch the last quarter. There had been a lot of talk that the director was looking for new faces because the home audiences were turning their sets off.

I guess when I appeared it was a bigger moment for my mother than it was for me. What's nice about it is that she called up everyone in advance so the whole neighborhood saw me."

"How great."

"The only thing wrong is that she told them I was going to be on every week," Bill said.

"Since you've been there, what would be your advice for another fan who might wind up on the TV screen?"

"Be yourself. No matter what you do, give it your best shot, whether it's yelling, making ugly faces or sticking your tongue out at the camera. Above all, don't let them see you sweat -- and mind your manners.

TV audiences can't stand someone who makes a fool out of himself. If they decide they don't like you, They'll all get up and go to the bathroom at the very instant your big moment comes."

Freshman opposes liberal tone; urges editor to go mainstream

To the Editor:

Being a freshman I was unaware of the aspects of Creighton University. I have found many favorable opportunities, with one exception, The Creightonian.

Instantly I knew who your choice for president was the first time I read the paper. It did not bother me for I had confidence (as did the overwhelming majority of America) in my candidate.

A week after the election you published a sour, resentful editorial by Art Buchwald concerning the Bush campaign.

Why couldn't you follow the example of your fallen hero, and accept defeat like a gentleman? Nobody likes a sore loser.

I am not too worried about your droning left wing liberal tone.

It is a well known fact that more young people are flocking to the Grand Old Party rather than the Democratic Party. Why not follow the example of your peers, or at least enter part of the mainstream?

Jays travel to Cleveland State tonight

Bluejays looking for some answers

Hit by a bunch of Cyclones...

Sophomore center Chad Gallagher goes up for a shot against Iowa State's Victor Alexander on Tuesday night. The Cyclones defeated the Bluejays 88-58, giving the squad the worst home defeat in history. The Bluejays shot 25 percent from the field for the game.

Next Bluejay Home Game
Monday, Dec. 5 vs. San Jose State at 7:35 p.m.

By Kevin Sarver
Creightonian Editor

The Bluejay basketball team will take an 0-2 record into Cleveland, Ohio tonight when it faces the Cleveland State Vikings. Cleveland State returns two starters from last year's 22-8 squad.

The game will be broadcast live on WOW Radio, 590 AM, at 7:30 p.m.

On Monday night, the Bluejays host the San Jose State Spartans at the City Auditorium. Tip-off is scheduled for 7:35 pm.

Head coach Tony Barone has called this year's squad the best Creighton has ever had. On Tuesday night against Iowa State in front of over 6,000 fans, the team played like one of the worst.

Trailing 19-3 after nearly eight minutes of play, the Bluejays went on to lose 88-58.

The 30-point home loss was the worst for any Bluejay team in Creighton's history.

The statistics for the game were simply staggering:

*The team was 8-36 from the field in the first half at 22 percent.

*The team was 11-39 from the field in the second half at 28 percent.

*For the game, the team was a miserable 19-75 at 25 percent.

*The Bluejays scored their first perimeter basket with 9:54 left in the game, an 18-footer by junior Matt Roggenburk.

*The team was 2-21 from the perimeter the entire game.

*The team was 6-8 on easy layups, which is included in its 17-56 shooting from inside the lane.

"(Assistant coach) Rick Johnson said it the best, it was the first time he's ever been in a game where he wished the buzzer went off early," Barone said. "And when you have that feeling at the end of a basketball game, that's about as bottomless a pit as you can have."

The Cyclones shot a sizzling 33-55 from the field for 60 percent. Forward Elmer Robinson, probably Iowa State's best player, scored only two points and played only the first 15 minutes of the game due to foul trouble.

A very emotional Barone tried to answer questions following the game, but said he didn't have any answers.

"I think you almost have to try to shoot 25 percent," Barone said. "I have no explanation whatsoever why we played the way we played. We had some goals before the game and we didn't reach any of our goals."

"This is a tough loss for us. I was disappointed, we had a good fan turnout and we just, mentally, didn't play. We need to evaluate, I think, our approach to what we have to do to win the game."

The Bluejays had a chance to cut the lead to six when trailing 34-25 with 2:48 left in the first half, but junior forward Todd Eisner's three-point attempt missed and Iowa State started a fast break.

Iowa State's Victor Alexander, who led the Cyclones with 19 points, was fouled by Eisner on a layup for a three-point play. The six point swing set the tone for the second half.

"We tried to do a lot of things that we can't do as a basketball team," Barone said. "We're just going to have to go back and look at the concepts we have, offensively and defensively."

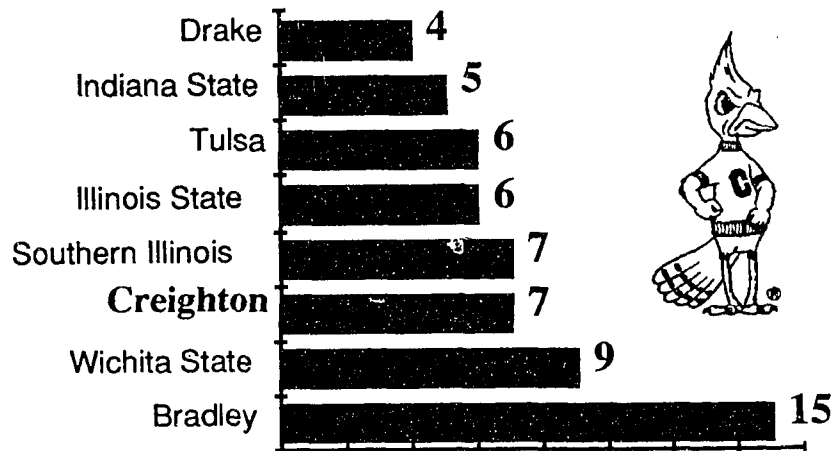

"We are going to have to decide what went wrong, because right now, I have no idea. That's a terrible indictment in terms of our basketball team, not knowing why we played the way we played."

Senior guard James Farr led the Bluejays with 12 points, but was four for 13 from the field, one for nine in the first half. Roggenburk finished with 10 points, two for nine from the field and 0-4 from three-point range.

Sophomore center Chad Gallagher also chipped in 10 points, but fouled out with 9:35 to play. Sophomore Bob Harstad pulled down a team-leading 12 rebounds.

"We will absolutely have to make some lineup changes, there's no question about it," Barone said. "We've had some guys who have been, in two games, very consistent at not doing some things that we think they are capable of doing."

Born to dribble...

Iowa State's Mike Born pressures Bluejay guard Matt Roggenburk during the game on Tuesday night. Iowa State coach Johnny Orr said the Cyclones had to stop Roggenburk in order to win. Roggenburk was 2-9 from the floor, including 0-4 from the three-point stripe, to finish with 10 points.

Swim team off to Philadelphia

The Creighton swim team will compete in the National Catholic Championship in Philadelphia this weekend against 18 Catholic Universities.

"We think we'll have good performances this weekend," coach Jack Jackson said. "We have broken almost every school record this year."

The Bluejay and Lady Jay swim teams placed fifth and sixth respectively at the Wyoming Invitational on November 18.

Jackson said he is pleased with the performance of both teams so far this year. The team's record is 3-0 in dual meets.

The Bluejays and Lady Jays will begin training after finals for the Fort Lauderdale meet which is scheduled for December 28 thru January 3.

'Team took a small step'

Lady Jays beat UNO, host Bradley tonight

By Kevin Sarver
Creightonian Editor

The Lady Jays will take a 1-1 record into tonight's 6 p.m. contest at the Creighton Gymnasium against Bradley University.

"We don't know a lot about Bradley other than the fact that they are 1-1 and I would say they are a much better team than UNO," coach Bruce Rasmussen said.

"Right now, we have to be a lot more concerned with what we are doing than what somebody else is doing. When we were much more experienced as a basketball team, we could get into a lot more detail on a scouting report.

"Our kids have trouble remembering what we're trying to do, let alone what somebody else is trying to do. I'm less concerned with what the score of the game is as long as we continue to get better.

Senior Mary Hohl iced the game with two more free throws with three seconds left to give the Lady Jays their first win of the year, 71-67.

The Lady Mavericks led for most of the second half, including 67-65 with 1:10.

"We're at the point right now with our players that we can't go into any game expecting a win," Rasmussen said. "We've got to take a small step every time we play and I thought we took a small step (with the win), it wasn't a large step.

"I was pleased with the fact that with our young kids, in the last two minutes of the game, we had a chance to win it and we won it, but we didn't play well."

Senior center Jeanine Kardell led the Lady Jays with 23 points. Freshman forward Kathy Halligan scored 16, including four of seven shooting from the three-point line. Hohl chipped in 10 points.

Freshman forward Amy Spencer and Freund hauled down eight rebounds.

UNO guard Jill Dau led the Lady Mavs with 24 points.

"We don't have a defensive player right now that has the intelligence of play to guard an intelligent player like Jill Dau, and that almost beat us by itself, and it wasn't a one-player show for UNO," Rasmussen said.

Rasmussen said he didn't any one player played exceptionally well for the Lady Jays. He said a few players played well in stretches, but then they also played miserably at other times.

"Offensively, we make so many bad decisions that we stop ourselves," Rasmussen said. "We're not powering the ball inside, we are forcing the ball when we shouldn't, and we are not driving the ball or reversing it when we should."

But Rasmussen said a win is a win, whether or not the team played well to get it.

"The important thing is that we got a 'W' and two months from now it counts as much as any other 'W,' Rasmussen said. "How we got it doesn't count as much for the fact that we did.

"It's nice to have the experience of a close game, but I'd rather have 20-point games and get the experience of close games some other time."

Quote of the Week

Business manager Marcil resigns

Athletic department business manager Mike Marcil has resigned to take the position of assistant athletic director at Miami Dade North Community College in Florida.

Marcil held the position for the last three years.

No official plans have been set for replacing Marcil, according to sports information director Lisa Gordey. Eric Campbell, assistant business manager and baseball coach, is handling all of the responsibilities.

One-Act play festival begins Thursday at IPAC

By Sandy Bolam Drummond
Entertainment Editor

The department of fine and performing arts will present five one-act plays Dec. 8-10 at the Interim Performing Arts Center (IPAC).

Most of the plays are comedies, selected by its directors, who were chosen from proposals submitted by directing students and faculty members.

Sonia Keffer is presenting "Graceland" by Ellen Byron.

"It is the story of two women, who for their own reasons, need to be first into Graceland (Elvis' mansion) when it opens," Keffer said. "This play has audience appeal because of all recent Elvis publicity. Although he is dead, maybe, he still carries a large audience."

Keffer said that her production is a fun, light comedy.

"These are two characters who would have never met, and Graceland brings them together," she said.

"Drinking in America," by Eric Bogosian, is directed by Tim Siragusa. Siragusa said the play is a group of nine monologues about the roles of men in America. He said his production is black comedy.

"The style of the play is different," he said. "It takes elements of pop culture seen before and twists them around and lets you see them through an angle that makes you think."

"It's a fun play. You never know what the actors are going to do next. Live theater is fun because the audience participates."

Amy Harmon is currently directing a one-act play entitled "Self Torture and Strenuous Exercise" by Harry Condoleon.

"It is a play about two married couples in a love quadrangle, torturing themselves and finding salvation from this," Harmon said.

Harmon said the play is funny because the characters are cartoon-like and are extreme.

The fine and performing arts department is also presenting "Something Unspoken," directed by Harry Wingfield. They will also be presenting "The Apple Tree," a musical comedy that was presented during Parent's Weekend.

Christmas concert set for Sunday

Creighton will open the winter holiday season with its annual Christmas Concert Sunday at 7 p.m. in St. John's Church.

The concert is free and open to the public.

The evening will include several selections performed by the University Chorus, a group of nearly 30 student singers, within a setting of lessons and carols.

The program will offer the holiday spirit from many lands and ages, including a 13th century plainsong, a medieval German piece, an old English carol and a traditional French song.

Directing the chorus will be Dr. Marilyn Kielniaez, organ and chorus instructor.
