Committees Report; 100 Invitations Sent to Nearby Schools

Definite plans for Omaha's seventh annual Catholic Student Leadership convention crystallized into final form at the meeting of the Omaha Student Leadership committee Sunday, in the Creighton library.

Plans for a closing dinner and for a tea were discussed and agreed upon. Reports of various committees headed the meeting. The Rev. F. G. Deglman, S. J., sodality moderator, asked the resolutions committee to have complete drafts of their measures before March 4.

Reservations for accommodations for delegates to the convention March 12 and 13 are pouring into Father Deglman's office.

Grand Island Accepts

St. Mary's high school of Grand Island sent its acceptance to head the list of schools from the dioceses of this territory. More than 100 letters of invitation were sent to all the Catholic schools in the dioceses of Omaha, Lincoln, Grand Island, Des Moines, Sioux City, Winona, Sioux Falls, and St. Paul (southern half).

Will Handle Publicity

An extensive publicity program by members of the school of journalism is underway. Accounts of events leading up to the convention and the convention itself are to be sent to newspapers in the towns from which delegates are coming, local radio stations and local newspapers.

String Quartet Will Make Radio Debut

A string quartet formed recently under the guidance and sponsorship of the Rev. Floyd A. Brey, S. J., will make its debut March 21 when it broadcasts on the University of the Air.

The quartet, which has been given the name of the Bluejay String Quartet, is composed of Joseph Sosnik, C. 1, first violin, leader of the group, Richard Baudou, C. 1, second violin, Frances Riha, viola, and Marian Johnson, cello.

The group was formed with the purpose of increasing the desire for this form of music and with the hope that similar groups will be formed, according to Joseph Sosnik, leader.

Name Appointments to Chamber of Commerce

New appointments to the Creighton chamber of commerce are announced this week. Those receiving appointments are: Lawrence Keller, C. 4; Bernard Opitz, C. 2; William Heaston, C. 2; Joseph Sosnik, C. 1; Daniel Lynch, C. 1, and John Torpey, C. 1.

The chamber of commerce was founded to encourage and reward scholarship among students of the college of commerce. Another aim is to promote student interest in the problems of the commercial world. A third plan is to form an effective working unit for the promotion and execution of such student activities as are conducive to the best interests and welfare of all the students of the college of commerce.

Doctor Gets Army Transfer

Dr. F. E. Colien, assistant professor of bacteriology and preventive medicine, has received orders from the chief of staff of the U. S. Army assigning him to Fort Trinity as director of the fourth army medical laboratory.

Dr. Colien was formerly associated with the 7th Corps Area surgeon's office.

Blue Wings Present Skaters; John Chappel Master of Ceremonies

With John K. Chappel, WOW announcer and former Creighton student, as master of ceremonies, the Blue Wings presented a variety of entertainment at the half of the Creighton-Marquette basketball game, Saturday night.

Headlining the performance was a return engagement of Dr. S. S. Sutura, D. D. S., '33, and Herman La Manna, and their roller skating act. Dorothy Sorys, child acrobat, returned with the skaters. They also added to their act the rope stunts and skate dancing of Donald Saunders.

Father Noonan Writes President of Train Wreck

"If the Rev. Herbert Noonan, S. J., has as eventful a trip on the remainder of his trip to Rome as he had on the first leg of his journey, we'll be very lucky if we ever see him again." This declaration was made by the Very Rev. Joseph P. Zuercher, S. J., president of the university, after he had read a letter sent him by Father Noonan.

High point in Father Noonan's letter was his account of the train on which he was riding wrecking at Worth, Ill., only 18 miles out of Chicago. Father Noonan was en route to Chicago, on the first lap of his journey to Rome, Italy, where he will attend a Jesuit convention.

Seal Is Merry Muddle to Uninitiated

But Investigation Reveals Historic Value, Significance

By Jim Muldoon

"There are more things in Heaven and Earth than are dreamt of..." So said the famed Shakespeare.

But it is not likely that even the venerable Will could have conceived of a sight which is accessible always to Creighton lads and lassies. Comparatively few, however, are those among the students who have noticed this strangest of campus sights, the picturesque emblem inlaid in the tile floor in front of the Arts bulletin board. Truly it is a spectacle to startle the most fortitudinous freshman.

This symbol to end all symbols is definitely awe-inspiring. Circular in form, it covers an area of about eight square feet. The outside of the circle contains those immortal words, "Creighton University," inlaid most appropriately in large blue letters.

Attendance Attitude at Student Chapel Impresses Visitor

Especially impressing to a visitor on the Creighton campus is the attendance and attitude of the students at Friday morning chapel.

This is the opinion of Margaret Mattox, Grinnell senior, to whom the deep reverence shown by the students during the service "was beautiful to witness."

A spectator at the Creighton-Grinnell tilt Thursday evening, Margaret was surprised at the lack of enthusiasm shown by the student body.

The number of dates at basketball games was also new to Margaret.

"At Grinnell there is an old tradition which forbids dating at the games. If students attempt to violate this custom, they are booted out. The coeds form their own little group while the boys have their section. Our plan prevents students from gazing into each others' eyes instead of giving full attention to the contest," she said.

Oratorical Contest Date Is Named

Preliminaries for the annual oratorical and commentator contest will be March 14, according to an announcement this week by the Rev. James F. Orford, S. J., director of debate.

The commentator contest is an innovation, replacing the extemporaneous contest of former years.

Winner of the oratorical division will be awarded the Hibernian medal and the McShane medal will go to the victor in the commentator contest.

For the preliminary contest, each contestant will speak for two minutes on a subject of his own choice. Twelve finalists will be chosen by the judges to compete in the April finals. Judging will be based on the speakers' delivery.

Of the 12 finalists chosen, six will deliver their oration from the stage, while the other six will comment from their seats.

Before speaking, the oratorical speakers will draw and announce the names of the contestants who will comment on their speeches.

Any undergraduate student of the university is eligible for the contest. Entries may be left in the boxes of Prof. Edwin Puls, speech instructor, or the Rev. James F. Orford, S. J., directors of the contest.

Preliminaries will be in the Moot court.

"Cleaner Omaha" Objective of City's Mayor Dan Butler

By Jay Breen

Omaha is going to be a "clean" city if Mayor Butler has anything to do with it. "As long as I continue my work as mayor of this city I shall use my authority to ban or censor shows, books or anything else that I consider bad for the public morals." This was the opening declaration made by Mayor Dan B. Butler, Creighton law school graduate of '28, in an interview with a Creightonian reporter today. "However," he continued, "a Public Welfare Board, which will be appointed shortly, will handle most of this work."

The mayor emphatically contradicted critics who assailed his actions because they felt he was "overshooting his duties as mayor." "I feel that an active interest in the morals of a city goes with the mayor's job," he declared.

Mayor Butler answered the criticism of Dr. Wiggam, World-Herald columnist, who asserted that "the quickest way to increase the

Twin McGuires Confuse Profs as Undertaker Turns Student

To what extent does the undertaking of an undertaker go? This is the problem that perplexed James McGuire, M. 2, as his twin brother, John, an undertaker from St. Louis, undertook to attend a day at the Creighton medical school in the guise of Brother James.

Here is the situation: James McGuire, a sophomore medic, found it necessary to take a day off last week and rest in St. Joseph's hospital. His brother, John, a twin of no mean likeness, was in Omaha visiting James.

Some of James' colleagues hit upon the plan of sending John to school in place of James, thus saving on the number of class absences. Bed-ridden James was not informed of the plan and as a result he basked in the sunny confines of the hospital with not a care in the world.

In the meanwhile, Brother John attended classes of James, keeping his identity to himself. The instructors were not wise, but other students were not wise, but that evening when James was informed of the ruse he thought he would be wise to rush up to

Camera Club Will Launch Kodak Contest at Meeting Tonight

Clicking into activity, the photo fans of the newly formed Camera club will hold its second meeting tonight at 7:30 in the law building, according to Joe Burke, A. 2, committee chairman.

Sponsors of the club, Dr. Frank Murphy, assistant professor of pediatrics, and Dr. Harry Murphy, associate professor of obstetrics, are arranging to have a guest speaker at the meeting. Identity of the speaker was not revealed.

A Kodak contest will be launched at tonight's meeting, sponsored by the club and open to all students of the university. Definite plans and prizes will be formulated during the meeting. Installation of officers will also take place.

More than 20 postcard invitations were issued by the membership committee of Pierce Chambers, J. 2, James Westfall, A. 1, and William Furze, M. 4. Attendance is not restricted to those receiving invitations, the membership committee said. The program is designed for beginner "box" fans.

Faculty Moderator Issues First Call For Bluejay Revue

Chancellor J. Francis O'Sullivan, chancellor of the supreme court and chief executive of the Delta Theta Pi, national law fraternity, was guest speaker of the local chapter at a dinner at the Conant hotel Sunday night.

Mr. O'Sullivan spoke to those present on the importance of the fraternity to the future law student. Other speakers were Prof. Charles Bongard, faculty representative of the fraternity; Joseph C. Wolf, district chancellor of the fraternity for Iowa and Nebraska, and Fred Wolf, former dean of the Byron senate, Conrad Buell, L. 3, present dean of the Byron senate, introduced the speakers.

Members of the fraternity met at the Paxton hotel Tuesday night for a smoker and business meeting.

Father Herbers Dashes All Rumors of No Production

First official call for 1938 Bluejay Revue talent is issued this week by the Rev. Joseph Herbers, S. J., moderator of grammaties. Father Herbers said that the answer to the question, "Will there be a Bluejay Revue of 1938?" could be answered only by the students.

The call for talent dashed all possibility of truth in the rumor that no revue was being planned for this year. Setting a precedent of speed that will probably carry on throughout rehearsals and production, Father Herbers asks that all those who wish to take part in the revue place a card in his letter box in the administration building before Friday morning. This card is to state willingness to take part in the revue and whether the aspirant prefers to have a part in a skit or can dance or play some musical instrument.

The university orchestra and male chorus will be unable to take part in the revue as they will be preparing for their spring concert.

Father Herbers reminds students that agreement to take part in the production signifies a willingness to come to rehearsals whenever called and to work faithfully and seriously.

The Bluejay Revue has been Creighton's outstanding production for a number of years. Last year's show, at the Paramount theater, was highly praised by Omaha dramatic critics. The Rev. Doyle, S. J., now at St. Louis university, was in charge of the show, with Milton Reick directing. Approximately 100 students took part in the production.

Set Deadline for Sorority, Frat Pictures

Bluejay Editor Grants Extension of Time

Deadline for Bluejay fraternity and sorority pictures has been extended to March 5, according to Louis Seminara, Bluejay editor. This extension of time has been granted because many fraternities and sororities have failed to have three-fourths of their members sit for the pictures. No further extension for this section of the book will be granted.

No fraternity will be represented in the fraternity section of the book unless the president sees to it that the designated number go down and make arrangements for prints.

Group pictures were taken February 20 and 27; all remaining groups to appear in the annual will be taken March 6. Any group which has not been notified for group pictures will be obliged to contact the Bluejay editor immediately.

All fraternity presidents who have not submitted a membership list and history of the fraternity to the Bluejay editor are requested to do so immediately. The membership list should include a list of officers, actives and pledges. This information is needed in order that each fraternity (Continued on Page 2)

Debate Squad Faces Hastings College Today

Gail Burke, L. 1, and John Kerrigan, L. 2, Creighton debaters, meet the Hastings college debaters at 3 o'clock today in the Moot court. Creighton will uphold the negative side of the question, Resolved, That a national labor relations board should be empowered to enforce arbitration of all labor disputes.

After the Hastings debate, the Creighton squad, composed of Gail Burke, L. 1; John Kerrigan, L. 2; John Hendrick, L. 2, and Robert Henatsch, A. 3, will entrain for Iowa university, Iowa City, to engage in a three-day "free-for-all" with 30 other college debate teams from the midwest.

Next on the roster is Rockhurst college, March 7. The debate will take place at Kansas City, Mo., with Robert Henatsch, A. 3, and John Hendrick, L. 2, taking the affirmative side of the national relations board question.

A debate with Nebraska university is tentatively scheduled for March 10.

Students to Direct and Present Recitals Over Air

O'Connor Stars as Creighton Players Amuse Large Audience

By Vincent Thillen

Top honors go to garrulous Thomas O'Connor, C. 2, for his steady performance in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" Wednesday night at Creighton's auditorium.

Never slipping out of character in a difficult role O'Connor gave a "rolie" portrayal of Judd Tolliver, easy going mountaineer. Always "a mindin'" his own business his steady performance was a definite relief to the slapstick comedy supplied by the atmosphere of the play.

Put on before a full house the acting had the audience in the aisles, as they say in the vernacular. Comedy was provided by Phyllis Hill, C. 1, and Henry "Bugs" Bristowe, J. 1, found instant favor with the audience. Many lines brought forth chuckles and their timing was applauded.

Natural, convincing acting by James Muldoon, C. 1, and the sympathetic performance by Anne Schuetz, J. 1, were highlights of the presentation. Muldoon played the part of a lackadaisical hill-billy whose greatest pleasure was shooting down those "consarned" Falins. Miss Schuetz acting the small part of Sal Tolliver, a tuberculosis victim, died in the first act but did much to further the plot.

James Kigen, L. 2, as Uncle Bill Beems a justice of the peace, proved an excellent foil for the comedy of Miss Hill. While Robert Prentiss, J. 4, as the villainous Red Fox, got himself thoroughly hated before the end of the second act.

Regina McDermott, J. 4, did not attempt to become dramatic in the lead part of June Tolliver.

Rehearsals Open for St. John's School Play

Rehearsals for "Life Begins at Sixteen," the play to be given by the Dramatic club of St. John's High school begin this week.

Four members of the cast have already been selected. Harriett Goodhope will be Mrs. Jessie Hollis; Rita Schlueter, Hilda, a Swedish hired girl; Mary Strahl, Snookie Hollis; and Betty Zimmerman, one of the "Secret Seven." The rest of the cast will be announced next week.

Milton Reick, director of Creighton's 1937 Bluejay Revue, is directing the play. "Life Begins at Sixteen," written by Hilda Manning, attempts to picture American youth as it actually is.

Drum Major Tetiva Leads Band Drill

One, two, three, four—and Drum Major Erwin Tetiva, C. 2, put the Creighton band through formations during the half of the Drake-Creighton basketball game Monday night.

To the tune of the Drake theme song the Creighton band formed a D, in honor of the visiting team. Then the drum major led his men into a C formation to the strains of the White and the Blue.

Throughout the game Director Don Libby, A. 3, and Maestro Joseph Sosnik, C. 1, directed the band in various selections.

Stow's Best Average Earns Brown Derby

"Thomas Stow please step forward. Mr. Class President, present Mr. Stow with the Brown Derby." That's probably the way conversation will run in the law school locker room today, and for a very good reason.

Stow, it has been revealed, earned the highest average among freshman law students for the first semester and with that honor will go the dubious one of sporting the school's traditional brown derby.

Robert Denny led the second year class with an average of 92.9. James Gleason and Harold Lebens tied for top honors in the senior class with averages of 91.1.

Lawrence Clinton and John O'Sullivan with 86.8 and 85.6 respectively earned second and third in the second year group. Conrad Buell with 89.3 and Bill Redle, vice president of the Students Union Board of Governors, followed Lebens and Gleason in the senior division. Redle's average was 89.07.

the "beefers"

Creighton university's little theatre group presented "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" at the university auditorium last week. Much has been said, pro and con, about the performance of the cast. That is always the case after any production.

We would like to deviate from the usual and say a word here about the performance of the audience. There was in last Wednesday's audience the usual smattering of extroverted "wise guys" who are so emotionally unbalanced as to disrupt the entire audience, embarrass the players and embarrass even more the true Creighton students who must admit that these mal-contents are fellow students.

The Grade School Mind

We apply these most uncomplimentary titles and adjectives to that small group that insists on making pseudo clever remarks and engaging in general rowdy conduct toward the play and the players. This conduct was evident not only at this play but even more so at previous productions. The general run of Creighton students surely must join in hoping that the hecklers who start the tumult are really few, that they are not upper classmen, and that they do not represent the typical Creighton student.

They "Pan" Everything

Just why these few students should conduct themselves in this way furnishes grounds for speculation. They certainly can have no appreciation for the effort that members of the cast and their director have expended to produce the play. The cast, students like themselves, have given their time, slighted personal duties and pleasures, that the show might be presented. That effort alone is worthy of commendation. But there is always the regrettable minority that "pans" every effort in extra curricular work. They crab about everything that anyone tries to do. It's not only plays they pan, but everything from the military department to the sodality.

He Has Missed

And who belongs to this group that heaps derogation upon those who try? Its membership is usually restricted to alleged students whose curricular and extra curricular activities consist totally in swiping the foam off the one they have and ordering Mazie to draw one more.

some questions

Last week at the Jewish Community Center Professor William Sternberg of the Creighton law school made a spirited and talented defense of the Constitution against "impatient politicians" who seek to "gain new powers against constitutional restraints."

And certainly there are few who will challenge Professor Sternberg on his knowledge of the law or his high motives in defending the Constitution. And yet for all that there are a few questions we would like to ask, questions that somehow or other haven't been answered, and questions that bear closely on the motives of those who seek to resist progress by raising the shield of the Constitution as though it were some divine document eternally forbidding all change, all progress, all attempts at reform.

First, haven't almost all of the demands for changes in the Constitution originated among the people, only slowly to trickle into political platforms and finally into the law?

Secondly, however sure you and men like you may be that the Constitution permits economic and social reforms, as you declared that it did, hasn't all of the duty of deciding what the Constitution permits rested solely with the Supreme Court?

Thirdly, has not the Supreme Court repeatedly decided against reforms of all kinds, regardless of how much the people demanded them? Did it not say that slavery was right, that an income tax was unjust, that minimum wage and maximum hour laws were against the Constitution, and did it not put these dampers on reform against the clearly manifested will of the people?

And finally, has not the opposition of the Supreme Court to reform meant that reform is against the tenets of the Constitution, for only the Court can, under the present set-up, decide what the Constitution permits?

So, would we not be justified in saying that the Constitution is and always has been all right, but the trouble has been with a Supreme Court that has taken upon itself the task of interpreting the Constitution, even though the Constitution absolutely does not give it the right to do so?

Therefore, should not people like yourself, who approve of social and economic progress, bend their efforts to giving the Constitution a chance to prove itself without the uncalled for services of a reactionary Court?

And isn't the issue now, as it always has been, not whether the Constitution permits progress, but whether the Supreme Court will permit progress?

Europe muddles on

Chancellor Hitler has laid down the law to Europe in a clear and decisive fashion. Either openly or by innuendo he has let the world know Germany's program and that program is very much the old program of control of all German speaking people of Bismark and Wilhelm II. First, he wants Europe; secondly, commercial outlets for German trade and opportunities for a world market for the products of German scientific ingenuity.

He wants domination over Austria; he wants to control the Germans of Czechoslovakia. And he will work with Teutonic bluntness for these objectives and will readily throw the might of the German army into the fight when necessary.

And Italy, Poland and Austria are willy-nilly lined up under his banner. His course is their course and together they present a picture of combined power that for the moment, at least, has Europe buffaloeed.

England is trying to muddle through, as usual. France is frightened as usual. Russia sneers at the "degenerate house painter" and America wonders what is going to happen. The one sure factor in the whole situation is that war is a near possibility, perhaps a certainty.

For one wonders how much longer the democratic nations will allow the robber coalition of central Europe to thief and plunder, to destroy the integrity of weak nations, insult the strong ones, oppress 130 million people?

Certainly England must realize that this cannot go on forever. She has made one concession after another and England does not freely give of anything. France must realize that granting new privileges to Hitler without a struggle only means new arrogance and greater demands. And Russia must realize that Hitler is only waiting the day when he will consider himself strong enough to extend the "Drang nach Osten" to the Ukraine.

And if they decide to give no more, as would be the case if England returns Eden to power, the only answer is war, a dreadful, bloody holocaust that would envelop all the peoples of the continent and perhaps even America. And the question is a sharp one in human psychology. How much will peaceful nations sacrifice to preserve their peace?

The answer to that gloomy question is the answer to the fate of Chancellor Hitler and perhaps even of democratic government.

Campus Institute Finds Students Favor Military Training Course

By Willis Lee

Upon hearing all the grumbling every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons down in the Military department, the Institute of Campus Opinion finally decided to find out just how the majority of the male students feel about R. O. T. C.

The institute discovered that, despite all the sorrowful feelings over having to attend the military classes, the boys on the Hill wouldn't pass up the training for anything in the world.

When asked the question, "Are you in favor of compulsory R. O. T. C. training for two years?" they agreed almost to a man that it was an excellent course and that it is good training no boy should miss.

They didn't say that they liked the army or the life connected with it but they all were honest with themselves and said that there is no better character builder than a military course.

Some of the answers the boys gave will probably warm the heart of Major Higgins when he sees that some of the most notorious class-cutters on his list are really thankful for the chance to be able to take the course.

Some of the boys who formerly did not like the R. O. T. C. will probably jump over to the other side of the fence and be on the patriotic side when they read a few of the convincing reasons as to why military training is a good thing for a young man.

Of the students interviewed, some of the answers given by those who are now taking the courses will be printed to show how they stand on the subject.

Paul J. Kovar, C 2: "Yes, I am in favor of it. We are not a warring nation but if we ever have to go to war I am sure that no one wants to be cannon fodder. R. O. T. C. is the best insurance against this that a man can have."

Nick Rieman, A 2: "Yes. Although there are some drawbacks to the system, military training helps a great deal to produce in students the desirable qualities of promptness and thoroughness, which are too much neglected in other departments."

James Mulqueen, A 4: "Yes. We will have to have military training sooner or later. Besides, we have everything to gain and nothing to lose."

James Mullen, C 2: "Yes. World peace cannot last forever and two years of military training might help to save a few more lives in the event of war. It also develops personality and initiative among the men."

Returning Thanks Is Considered Important Duty

By the Rev. E. G. Deglman, S. J.

"No duty is so important as that of returning thanks," is a saying of St. Ambrose. This saying is just as applicable today as 15 centuries ago. It was then the sign of a sincere gentleman; it is still the sign of an appreciative soul.

One of the deep impressions of my boyhood was the remark once made by my father when I hurriedly arose from the table without saying my thanks to God: "The dog"—I had a little terrier—"leaves his meals without a prayer." And yet my dog so often looked his thanks, I thought. Was I not even as noble as my dog?

Little kindnesses rendered with good will so often go un-thanked for. Small courtesies extended with a touch of refinement are frequently overlooked or briskly shoved aside.

There are those who act so thoughtlessly toward others that one might think them of some superior mold, or at least that so they think themselves to be. There are those who seem to consider as their due the little helpfulness and generous attentions paid them; yet in fact the giver is not rarely a superior and always a better man.

Cornell May Have Its First Japanese Brain

Ithaca, N. Y., (ACP)—Cornell University's famous brain collection may have added to it its first Japanese brain, if the resolution of Dr. Tomitaro Makino, Japanese botanist, is carried out.

Dr. Makino, 78, wants his brain to be the first of his race in the Cornell collection, and will come to the United States to die, if necessary, to make that possible.

Under the law in Japan, a body may not be dissected until 24 hours after death. Preservation of brains requires removal within an hour after death. Cornell's brain collection has been used to make notable discoveries about the mind in general and in a few cases about the peculiarities of noted men.—ACP

Susan Campbell Crowned Queen of Mardi Gras

Amid a setting of shimmering silver Susan Campbell of Valentine, Neb., was crowned queen of the ninth annual Mardi Gras Friday evening, in the college auditorium.

The princesses approaching from backstage walked the length of the auditorium. From the far end the queen entered, followed by her young attendants. Under her coronation robe of white satin covered with brilliants, the queen wore a gown of white marquisette with a tight bodice, shirred sleeves, caught tightly at the wrists, a full skirt corded into a hooped effect. She carried an arm bouquet of white hyacinth bells tied with silver.

The gowns of the princesses and the small attendants of the queen were similar. They were of white net over satin, having tight bodices, full gathered skirts and square necklines. Their white head veils were caught with white carnations. They carried white carnations tied with silver.

Mrs. A. L. Coad, president of the Duchesne Alumnae, presented the queen with her crown. Eloise Creedon, last year's Mardi Gras queen, handed the queen her scepter. Then Miss Campbell, in a regal manner, walked to and mounted her throne, which glittered as beaten silver.

The assignment was designed to give students a realistic touch of newspaper life.

Lawyers Plan Annual Holiday to Honor Finders of New Day

By I. Snoop
In 1492 Columbus discovered America and a new holiday appeared on the calendar.

In 1776 somebody fired a shot heard around the world and another holiday appeared. But for the year 1938 the greatest event has been reserved. For in that year Creighton's Delta Theta Phi law fraternity held a smoker Tuesday, February 29, at the Paxton hotel.

And now throughout all eternity, February 29 will be set aside as Law day at Creighton, a day on which future generations will celebrate the invincible courage of the Creighton law students who discovered and appropriated a previously unknown day on the calendar and made it their own, such as Columbus discovered America and made it his own.

Students Defend "Big Apple"

A bill which would ban "round dances" including the "big apple" and "truckin'" at Mississippi schools of higher learning has students at the University of Mississippi all riled up. Comment from rank and file students as well as student-body leaders heaped denunciation upon the bill.

The lawyers announced their discovery of the new day last Monday in an announcement sent to members of the aforementioned fraternity and promptly relayed to The Creightonian.

A move promptly began in the low, pardon, law school to have the rest of the week off, but as yet no action has been forthcoming. However, university authorities have promised that hereafter lawyers will not have to attend any classes on February 29, except on leap years.

The rumor that a new set of textbooks, in which McGuffey's first reader will play the principal part, will soon be installed in the law school, had not been completely verified at the time The Creightonian went to press.
